

Drinking Drivers Face $2,000 Fine

Fines as high as $2,000 will be requested for impaired drivers appearing in Victoria provincial court resulting from amendments to the Criminal Code.

Changes in federal legislation have boosted the maximum fine for impaired drivers from the current $500 to $2,000 and Victoria regional crown counsel Wally Anderson said today he's certain prosecutors will seek higher penalties under new rules.

"I think raising the maximum reflects the legislature's interest that the situation be toughened up and although it hasn't yet been specifically discussed here, I'm sure our people will be asking for higher fines."

The Criminal Code amendments were proclaimed April 26 to deal with a problem that in B.C. has become so widespread it ranks second only to speeding.

Last year there were 17,768 convictions, warnings and 24-hour suspensions totalling 308 in Victoria and 6,000 on the Lower Mainland.

This year before May Victoria police charged 153 drivers with impaired and having a breath-alcohol content of .08, compared to 117 during the first five months of 1975.

The new fine maximum was lauded today by Superintendent of Motor Vehicles R. G. Whitlock, but he said effectiveness will "depend on how far the court is willing to go to make full use of higher fines."

"If they do use them it will undoubtedly benefit," he said, adding however that courts rarely made full use of the old $500 maximum.

Average fine for first time offenders in Victoria Provincial court is $350 to $400, below the $500 maximum, said Anderson.

Since the changes, he said prosecutors in at least one case have already asked that a $1,000 fine be levied, but whether or not they are imposed depends on the judge, the case, and the motorist's individual situation.

Anderson said it will "take a while for things to change." Whitlock pointed out that in addition to changes in fines amendments to the B.C. Motor Vehicle Act have been approved and are awaiting proclamation.

Amendments increase the first offender's licence suspension time from one month to three months and from three months to six months for a second offender, or if death, injury or property damage is involved.

The federal changes do not increase jail terms for drinking and driving offences, but they substantially increase the probability offenders may be jailed.

A first offence still carries the possibility of a maximum six-month jail sentence in addition to the $2,000 fine. And a jail sentence ranging from 14 days to one year is still mandatory for a second offence. For a third offence the range is three months to two years.

Whitlock said the stiffer penalties will definitely have a deterrent effect, besides there is a better chance of being caught because enforcement of laws has been stepped-up.

Yet police estimate that for every drinking driver caught, 20 escape detection.

CONSERVATION PAYS AT BANK

SEATTLE (AP) — A bank here has begun offering loans at interest rates well below the norm to persons who take steps to conserve energy through home remodelling or use of vehicles that use little fuel.

J. C. Baillargeon, chairman, Seattle Trust and Savings Bank, said the loans will reward energy conservation by coming with interest rates one-half to three-quarters per cent lower than norm loans.

Home purchase loans will be offered at 8.5 per cent, a half-per-cent lower than normal, for homes which score at least 15 points on a set of energy conservation standards set by the bank.

For example, six inches of ceiling insulation would score five points, wall insulation five points and floor insulation five points.

Lower-interest auto loans will be made for cars that get at least 25 miles to a gallon of gasoline, and lower rates are provided for boat purchases involving certain hull and engine combinations that conserve fuel.

Share the Risks B.C. Tells Ottawa

The B.C. government will continue its fight with the federal government over proposed changes in the federal-provincial cost-sharing program for hospital and post-secondary education facilities, Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said today.

Wolfe, back in Victoria after a planned two-day federal-provincial finance ministers meeting in Ottawa ended a day early, said the federal government expects the provinces to assume the larger share of financial risk for the shared-cost program, but still demands to have a say in these areas.

"If the federal government wishes to continue to be involved and to set some of the rules, it is certainly reasonable that it shares some of the risks," he said.

Ottawa proposed earlier this year that any increases in federal payments to the shared-cost program be tied to increases in the gross national product, rather than the current 50-50 formula.

Wolfe has said B.C. will not go along with any such change as the federal proposal would cost the province $500 million in the first year.

Extra costs would have to be picked up by B.C. taxpayers, and the province will not allow that, Wolfe said.

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP)

— A coroner's jury Tuesday night exonerated a six-man tactical squad in the shooting death of prison worker Mary Steinhauser, saying the squad acted in the belief her life was threatened by three prisoners holding her hostage.

The jury deliberated eight hours before ruling that Miss Steinhauser's death June 11, 1975, was unnatural and accidental. It decided that the tactical squad was justified in rushing the area where she and 14 other hostages were being held by convicts Andrew Bruce, Dwight Lucas, and Claire Wilson.

The seven-member jury recommended that future incidents at the British Columbia Penitentiary be handled by an outside body which should have training in negotiations, communications and tactical operations.

The group should be large enough so that rest periods and changes of shift can be accommodated, the jury said.

During the 41-hour June siege, members of the six-man tactical squad said they had no opportunity to sleep and some had gone without sleep for 50 hours.

They also testified during the inquest that they had little communication with prison officials and negotiators.

The jury recommended that an interim tactical squad be formed at the prison to act during the time that would pass from the beginning of any future incident until the outside squad could arrive. It said the penitentiary squad should be composed of non-custodial staff.

Coroner Doug Jack earlier drew attention to insufficient investigation following the incident by New Westminster City Police and the jury recommended that local police send qualified investigators into the penitentiary at the start of any incident.

The jury said "the frustration and tension of inmates at See GUARDS Page 2

Heavy Noose Pressure

OTTAWA (CP) — Many of the 133 members of Parliament who voted on second reading for abolition of hanging have been under heavy pressure to change their minds.

It has come as strongly from the 125 who voted to retain hanging as from their constituents.

The retentionists feel they can defeat the bill and restore hanging by changing a few minds before the vote on third and final reading is held.

The tactic appears to be working.

Bruce Halliday (PC—Oxford) visited his riding within a week of voting for abolition and returned to Ottawa saying he was still an abolitionist but might not be able to support the bill on third reading unless changes were made.

George Hees (PC—Prince Edward-Hastings) indicated Tuesday he also had changed his mind. He said he would vote for an amendment that would retain the death penalty for those who kill police or prison guards.

Flora MacDonald (PC—Kingston-and-The-Islands), an abolitionist, has found herself under heavy pressure from prison employees in her Ontario riding. Some of it is being generated by retentionists, Parliament Hill sources say.

Lincoln Alexander (PC—Hamilton West) says his resolve has only been strengthened by the retentionist blitz aimed at his constituents.

Mr. Alexander, in hospital with a back ailment, says he will do his best to get back to the House to support the abolition bill.

Like Mr. Alexander, Gus MacFarlane (L—Hamilton Mountain) has faced heavy pressure by critics who say he is two-faced.

SCHOOL SQUEEZE IF STRIKE LASTS

If the construction lockout lasts beyond the end of July, contingency plans will be needed to look after 750 students in the Gordon Head area, assistant school superintendent Dr. John Wiens said Tuesday.

"If the lockout ends this month, we will be all right," he said.

The schools affected are Lambriek junior secondary and Torquay elementary. About 500 students are scheduled to attend Lambriek in September and slightly more than 250 are expected at Torquay.

Both schools were within two weeks of being completed when the lockout took effect July 2.

It would only take a short time to complete the buildings and move furniture, which could be completed by September if work could resume by Aug. 1, he said.

School board officials plan meetings this week to prepare contingency plans for the 750 students in the event the lockout continues through July and into August.

Meanwhile, negotiations to end the strike-lockout have been slowed down by separate talks over trade issues of the various unions.

Jack Whittaker, spokesman for the operating engineers, said talks which opened Monday still had not reached the question of wages and other monetary matters Tuesday.

"It looks like we'll try to get the trade issues out of the way first," said Whittaker.

$100,000 Damage

MONTREAL (CP) — An official of Alcan Aluminum Ltd. said Tuesday that strikers who invaded the company's smelter at Shawinigan, Que., June 30, may have caused more than $100,000 in damage.

The strikers invaded the plant and ordered workers out, and then set up picket lines to keep them out, a company spokesman said.

He said the damage, an official estimate of which is still being made, is believed to have been caused soon after the strikers entered the plant. The smelter has since resumed normal production.

The Shawinigan facility is the only one of four Alcan smelters in Quebec currently not strikebound.

$107,008 JACKPOT

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — A Chicago man got a special bang out of the Fourth of July in this gambling resort when he heard bells on the one-dollar progressive jackpot machine at the MGM Grand Hotel.

The customer hit a $107,008 jackpot at 3 a.m. on the day the nation celebrated its 200th birthday, a hotel spokesman disclosed Tuesday.

A spokesman for the hotel said the payoff came on the same machine which set the all-time jackpot record payoff of $152,638 a year ago. The hotel spokesman said the winner asked that his name not be released.

'Lion' Dogs Police

TACOMA (AP) — The "lion" which led police officers on a long, bullet-punctuated chase here during the weekend is a dog.

Or so humane society officials believe after they captured a dog, part collie and part shepherd, with fur cut to make it look like the fearsome African creature.

The dog has a shaggy black mane, a closely-trimmed light brown body and a black tuft at the end of its long tail.

It was captured Sunday evening, about a day after the lion chase began.

Two police patrol officers saw the animal Saturday night. They fired at it with a shotgun and revolver, but believe they missed.

The creature was spotted again Sunday afternoon near the city dump but eluded officers in an hour-long search.

A humane society officer found the dog Sunday evening. He said it was cut on its paw, but not otherwise wounded.

Oak Bay Vetoes Pumping Station Plan

By AB KENT
Times Staff

A crowd of more than 400 articulate citizens persuaded Oak Bay council Tuesday to kill both the design and location of a proposed $1.4 million sewage pumping station at Shoal Bay.

Packing the Senior Citizens' Centre to overflowing, residents delivered an unmistakable message to a special two-hour meeting of council, which finally decided to tell the Capital Regional District to seek an alternative to the station.

The crowd about 300 were seated with the rest standing in the aisle and in every open doorway, represented a cross section of Oak Bay society.

There were professional men who left work early; retired gentry; a shapely lady in shorts fresh off her sun-deck; others dressed to the nines; couples with noisy youngsters; a woman knitting socks and two rows behind her a mother nursing an infant.

All had one thing on their minds — sewage.

Twelve of 15 speakers from the floor opposed the plan to fill a small cove and erect a large concrete pump-house to take sewage from parts of Victoria and Saanich and all of Oak Bay and send it over Gonzales Hill past Ross Bay to Clover Point outfall.

Aldermen learned:

—The proposed foreshore site is a park deeded in perpetuity to Oak Bay.

—Trial Island is the most-favored alternative site if any pumping station is necessary.

—Extension of McMicking Point outfall could eliminate the need of a pumping station at much less cost.

—There is less opposition to a previous suggestion that the station be placed away from housing at the edge of Oak Bay golf course.

—The Shoal Bay site is on a bird sanctuary and poses potential health and traffic hazards.

—All is not sweetness and light at similar pumping stations in Seattle.

After the hearing Mayor Brian Smith urged council to reject the capital region's plan.

"This should be a lesson that in Oak Bay we take our politics very seriously and matters involving the waterfront very seriously, and we don't appreciate being informed at the last minute," Smith said.

He said council was in the front line of controversy over the question while the regional board remained "in the misty distance."

He said the "most impressive meeting" showed Oak Bay citizens are vigilant of their waterfront and hold a "healthy distrust of any form of change."

Central Saanich Aid Bill Hiked

Central Saanich is going to have to pay more for police and fire answering services carried out by Saanich during off-hours.

Saanich's police board has decided that Central Saanich will have to pay $300 a month, instead of $200 a month, beginning July 1.

On Tuesday, Saanich's finance, legislative and health committee, decided the fire answering service should also be raised to $300 a month, effective Jan. 1, 1977. Central Saanich now pays $1,000 a year plus $7 per call.

Comptroller-treasurer Roy Broughton reported the former rates were established in 1972 and a first class fireman's salary has increased 61 per cent since that time. Central Saanich paid $2,540 for the fire answering service in the past year.

Committee chairman Aid.

David Paterson observed the $300 a month rate will mean a 42 per cent increase over the current rate.

Ald. Joe Bourque said the Saanich police's switch board handled many calls for Central Saanich.

"We'll probably be telling Central Saanich to get their own answering service in two or three years. Central Saanich has opted out of many intermunicipal arrangements. I think they're going to have to bear their share."

In other business the committee decided to write two owners of apartment buildings who are complaining about increased water rates, that they're not getting such a bad deal after all.

Len Bieller of 456 St. Patrick, part owner of the Kings Arms Apartments on Church, had written council objecting to the increased rates for the 22-unit building, Charles Rich of 2226 Arbutus, had a similar complaint on the billing for his 35-suite apartment at 1527 Cedar Hill Cross Road.

Broughton told the committee the average single-family home using the same consumption is billed $5.50 while an apartment unit with a water consumption of 4,743 gallons has a lesser bill of $4.14.

'White Nights' Pretoria Plan

PRETORIA (AP) — To clear the capital of blacks at night, white authorities are planning to expand two black townships outside Pretoria in a multi-million-dollar project.

The plan is to make Pretoria "white by night" by 1983 when huge new hostels will have been completed for 26,000 black workers at Mabopane and Mamelodi townships.

South Africa's segregated black townships are intended as dormitories for blacks who work by day in white areas, but many blacks, including domestic servants, live in compounds usually attached to white homes.

The new plan will have all domestic servants accommodated in barrack-like hostels in the townships. Householders will be able to apply for exemption in cases where black servants care for old or sick people.

Implementation of the new plan will begin in 1977 and the number of black workers sleeping in Pretoria will be gradually reduced from then on.

LIBYAN DIPLOMATS SENT PACKING

KHARTOUM (Reuters) — Libyan diplomats in Sudan packed their bags today after President Jaafar el-Nimeiry accused their country of mass-murdering Friday's unsuccessful coup against him and broke diplomatic links with Tripoli.

Nimeiry, who gave the Libyan diplomats 24 hours to leave, also is halting air traffic between the two countries, ending joint economic projects and not allowing people from Sudan to work in Libya.

At a rally in the southern Sudanese city of Juba Tuesday, he identified the leaders of what he termed Friday's foreign invasion as Saadiq al-Mahdi and Sharif al-Hendi, the Sudan news agency said.

He said Sharif al-Hendi, a prominent member of the Democratic Unionist party which was dissolved after Nimeiry assumed power in 1969, had smuggled arms into the country to overthrow the government in 1970.

Nimeiry said mercenaries involved in the invasion were trained in Libya on Soviet weapons, the agency said.

Beirut: Deadly Day

BEIRUT (UPI) — The deadliest day of Lebanon's civil war killed more than 300 soldiers and civilians today. Fighting between Christians and Moslems raged on all fronts.

The last convoy of refugees fled the ruined capital which suffered through its third week without water, electricity, or sanitation facilities.

The fighting throughout Lebanon claimed more than 300 dead and 500 wounded, making it the heaviest 24 hours of bloodshed in the 15-month civil war.

The heaviest fighting took place at the northern mountain town of Chekka, 10 miles south of Tripoli, where Christian forces said they beat back a fierce attack by Moslem leftists after an overnight battle which left at least 100 dead and most of the town in ruins.

A right-wing spokesman said the Moslem-Palestinian attack on Chekka was in retaliation for the 17-day Christian siege of Beirut's Tel Zaatar Palestinian Camp. He said the Christians had helped several thousand armed villagers brought in from the mountains by bus and car. He said they destroyed 17 armored vehicles and captured 15 more.

Meanwhile, the British Embassy evacuated another 45 persons — 29 Britons, 14 Americans and two Italians — in the sixth overland convoy to Damascus.

Pump House Plans Killed station is needed, and if so, what alternatives there are to putting it next to housing on one of the area's most attractive beaches. Smith said he also disapproved of the golf course as an alternative.

Ald. Norman Pimlott said council should reject both the site and plan and recommend that Oak Bay work with the regional district in a new proposal. His motion carried unanimously.

Ald. John Goult, chairman of the regional public works committee who acted as chairman of the meeting, pointed out the cost of locating the station at the golf course would be substantial and would still be open to criticism. An underground pump-house would solve most of the problems but cost and smell, he thought.

Goult assured the meeting there would be public awareness of future proposals.

Charles J. Keenan, a consulting engineer and former director of the B.C. pollution control branch, said a properly designed outfall at McMillan Point or on the east side of Trial Island "would positively work."

"Do you have the guts to buy it?" he challenged.

Pimlott was with regional engineer Norman Howard on a tour of pumping stations operating in the Seattle area, some located in residential areas presenting no problems to neighbors.

But he requested a visit to a pump-house that was not on the tour agenda, and on South Mercer Island, "I hit a dilly," Pimlott said.

That installation was a cause of concern to residents for years and is still not satisfactory although a new filter system for the odor was being tried.

Richard Bower, president of Shoal Bay Ratepayers Association and a next-door neighbor of the pump-house site, said residents do not believe pumping stations should be located in a residential area.

Citizens had been misinformed about the size he declared, and suggested the regional district had not been frank with council.

Bower drew loud applause when he noted that although an effort had been made to see how stations worked in Seattle, "No alderman yet has taken the time to find out how we would feel..."

John Hough, 261 King George, was booed when he charged that Bower, who is publisher of the Colonist, had misused his position to stir up opposition to the pump-house. Hough wondered whether he could have done the same had the site been proposed next to his home.

He called the campaign "a flagrant breach of the power of the press."

Janet Wilson replied that was "a horrendous slur against Mr. Bower," noting the protest was originated by someone who lived away from the site.

Association spokesmen were heard on cost appraisal, natural environment and wildlife, health hazards, visual pollution, traffic hazards, noise and legal aspects.

Walter Wilson drew extended applause with the suggestion: "Why not Trial Island?" He charged the $1,644 estimated additional cost of putting a station on the golf course was "unrealistically high to frighten us and sway public opinion," or else badly estimated.

Jack Melville said the installation would destroy a flowering headland with wild roses, lupins, stunted oak, oaks and raccoons. The "monstrous project" would be "a crime against the people of Victoria."

The coo is a wintering ground for the western grebe, he said, citing objections to its destruction from artists Fenwick Lansdowne and Brian Travers-Smith. He appealed, "for God's sake, while there is still time, let council seek out alternatives and leave this small pristine strip of parkland alone to survive for future generations, to enjoy before we are all swallowed up in concrete."

Lawyer Cecil Branson drew sustained applause in describing his title search of the site and finding it had been transferred for $1 by co-owner Francis Rattenbury in 1913 "forever for park purposes."

having voted for abolition after telling a constituent in 1975 he would support the death penalty for the killers of two Moncton, N.B., policemen if they were convicted and hanging was the penalty.

"But six months later, sitting in a court room and thinking carefully about whether the taking of another life would serve any useful purpose, I had to think differently," Mr. MacFarlane said.

Retentionists Bob Brisco (PC-Kootenay West) referred in the Commons to abolitionist Mike Forrestall (PC-Dartmouth-Halifax East) as being vilified by his constituents because of his vote.

"There's an enormous amount of pressure," Mr. Forrestall said in an interview. "You can't go to the airport, you can't go to the store. You walk into the supermarket and the clerk is giving you hell."

Mr. Forrestall says he has taken part in the last four Canadian debates on capital punishment, has read the British parliamentary debates, has studied Supreme Court decisions in the U.S. and has read the Law Reform Commission of Canada reports on sentencing and punishment.

"I'm convinced from what I've read that severe punishment doesn't deter crime."

In a survey of his constituents, he found 72 per cent supported capital punishment but 69 per cent supported a 25-year minimum sentence, as an alternative.

If third reading of the bill is held over until autumn, as retentionists hope it will be, "That would be cruel and unjust punishment," he said.

to their future transfer or sentencing to the solitary confinement unit as being the main contributing factor to the incident, and recommended that "procedures be developed, or an outside body be formed, to better ensure that disciplinary action is fair."

The jury said the tactical squad's action was precipitated by the actions of Bruce "because he held Miss Steinhilber from himself and the tactical squad in a manner leading the tactical squad to believe that her life was in immediate jeopardy from his knife."

The tactical squad was justified because its members believed they were acting to save Miss Steinhilber's life, the jury said.

Before the jury went out to consider its verdict, Coroner

Jack summarized the 16 days of testimony by 30 witnesses.

After observing that the volley of gunshots fired, according to witnesses, occurred within three to 10 seconds, Jack asked: "How much can the human mind absorb in a few seconds?"

He said the mind occasionally distorts what it observes, and recalled an earlier inquest in which five witnesses gave five different versions of what they saw.

Jack said that without being critical, he felt that New Westminster City Police investigators "fell short of their duties in not conducting a thorough investigation, knowing full well someone had died as a result of gunshot wounds."

In defence of the city police, he said "they had never been faced with situation of this type before."

FORD TO PAY FOR 'NEGLECT'

MONTREAL (CP) — A Quebec court ruled that Ford Canada "has knowingly neglected" to protect its cars adequately against the effects of Quebec winter weather conditions and snow-melting chemicals.

Judge Harold B. Lande of small claims court made the ruling June 25 and Ford officials were notified in the main Tuesday.

"It is common knowledge that in recent years the manufacturers of American automobiles have permitted a deterioration in the quality of the metal which goes into their product," the ruling said.

The judgment orders Ford to pay Montresier Dr. A. J. Danson $300 for the replacement of the bumper of a Ford Cougar which rusted two and a half years after he bought the car.

Little Impact From Massive Women's Year Blitz

OTTAWA (CP) — Popular attitudes on the status of women changed only marginally during 1975 — International Women's Year — despite a year-long blitz of advertising and other programs.

Findings released Tuesday by Marc Lalonde, federal minister of health and welfare, show that International Women's Year did have some impact, but not necessarily in ways that may have been expected.

Attitudes were measured by means of two surveys, one conducted in December, 1974, and the second a year later. In each survey 1,100 persons were asked a series of questions.

The study was prepared at a cost of $110,000 by Decision Marketing Research Ltd. of Toronto.

It found that 86 per cent of those surveyed had heard of International Women's Year and 74 per cent were aware of the "Why Not?" campaign.

One third said they were more convinced at the end of 1975 that women and men should have equal job opportunities, while three per cent said they were less convinced and the remaining 64 per cent said their attitudes were basically unchanged.

But at the same time, 74 per cent of men and 84 per cent of women said in December, 1975, that they felt women should have equal opportunities for employment, compared to 78 per cent of men and 85 per cent of women a year earlier.

And 84 per cent of men and 90 per cent of women supported the principle of equal pay for equal work compared to 85 per cent and 93 per cent in the earlier survey.

"Changes in society are slower than one would think and hope for," Lalonde said at a news conference.

He said that with these questions brought into the open, some people may perceive equality as a threat, and this may have accounted for changes the opposite of which may have been anticipated.

"For me, there is a parallel between the work accomplished during International Women's Year and the federal government's anti-smoking campaign that was launched in the late 60s," he said.

"After the anti-smoking campaign we saw a major shift in attitudes toward smoking. It took a full five years of heightened public awareness of health dangers related to smoking, however, before Canadians actually stopped smoking in any numbers."

Lalonde said he was encouraged by findings on child custody.

"Custody of young children is almost invariably granted by the courts to the mother, regardless of the circumstances surrounding the marriage breakdown," he said.

"Yet, findings from this survey indicate that the overwhelming majority of women and men do not agree with this course of action."

The study divided the attitudes of those surveyed into six categories: Female chauvinist, equality, feminist-traditional, traditional female, traditional male and male chauvinist.

The largest shift was in the quality category, into which six per cent more of the sample fell at the end of 1975 than a year before. However, four per cent more of the sample fell into the male chauvinist category.

Adding the percentage shifts in the six categories, Lalonde's office suggested in a news release there had been a 20 per cent shift in attitudes during International Women's Year.

FIREMEN'S TALKS RESUME

An arbitration hearing into the 1976 contract between the city of Victoria and its fire-fighting force, will resume Friday morning for final argument by both sides.

Carl Anselm, the city's bargainer, said today final argument is slated for the court room at the Saanich police station starting at 10 a.m.

The hearing adjourned June 21 so transcripts of evidence could be compiled and studied by both sides.

The union seeks an 18 per cent wage increase in one year or parity with majority of firefighters in B.C., plus other contract improvements.

Council and the Library

More in sorrow than condemnation we read Victoria city council's reaction to the Greater Victoria Library board's plea for new central facilities. Aldermen made facetious remarks such as, "How much did your slide show cost?" — that gem from Ron McKenzie. Another pearl from Helen Biernes: "Are meeting rooms and theatres really the object of a library?" This, of course, was only the first thrust in the library board's campaign for a building of approximately 140,000 square feet, costing in the neighborhood of $7 million.

There is no question that we need new core library facilities in Victoria. With a large retired population the central library is a focal point for the cultural life of the city. Anyone who doubts that fact need only look at lending turnover figures, which are the highest in Canada. Meeting rooms and theatres are an integral part of modern libraries as their Prairie counterparts illustrate. The salient question is, however, whether Victoria can afford such a large expenditure at this time.

While council is right to air its doubts on financial feasibility, there was no positive thrust to their criticisms, no mention of the possibility of public subscription, only the usual carping we have come to expect from this homogenized group. It is ironic that one hears so much ridicule of the Prairies here when their modern cultural facilities so outdistance our own. Are we to become a parochial, insular community that can only criticize the achievements of the outside world? Judging from council's rude treatment of the library board the die has already been cast. It also rankles that these same aldermen are so full of boosterism whenever a convention centre is mentioned, but the spectre of a library reduces them to petty remarks and childish attempts at humor.

Council should at least take the library board presentations seriously. They were elected to effect compromises, make decisions and enrich the city. A new library is a keystone to the cultural future of this area. It would seem aldermen would be better employed seeking a solution to library cost problems rather than expending their energies nitpicking and consolidating the morass of bylaws their predecessors have enacted. In other words, it would be good to see them do something creative, as opposed to wringing their hands over the number of tables on a sidewalk cafe.

PAUL WHITE

Death Penalty in the U.S.

WASHINGTON — The U.S. supreme court has guaranteed that the United States will enter its third century in the throes of a great social controversy over the death penalty.

The court never gives an inkling in advance of the timing of landmark decisions, and it played true to form with this one. Although it had received petitions, one of them from the state of Georgia, almost four years ago and heard arguments as long ago as April, 1975, the court delayed a decision until almost the very eve of the nation's 200th birthday.

That decision, upholding Georgia's revised capital punishment legislation, came as a chilling douche of moral rectitude on the bicentennial festivities which had already begun across the nation.

Wobbly Landmark

It came, too, only a few days after the closest western democracy had held a parliamentary vote in which the principle of abolition was passed by eight votes. This example, if such it was, from Canada played no part in the supreme court decision here which was a strict interpretation of specific state law, rather than a ruling on the principle of taking a human life, although one justice said there was nothing unconstitutional about that.

It cannot compare with the bold, compassionate, decision of 1972 in which the court had struck down the death penalty.

Yet that was a somewhat wobbly landmark, passed by a five-to-four vote and in which the majority finding that death was a "cruel and unusual punishment" in violation of the U.S. constitution was made by only two of the nine justices, Thurgood Marshall and William Brennan. Potter Stewart, Byron White and William Douglas had slightly differing reasons, although they went along in 1972.

The less-than-perfect finding, coupled with an invitation by Chief Justice Warren Burger to fellow-retentionists to challenge it, prompted a furious rewriting of state laws, culminating in the recapitulation of July 2.

Justices Marshall and Brennan were the only dissenters this time. Stewart and White had either changed their minds or their standards.

In the case of White, this is puzzling, because he had written in 1972 that "where the penalty is so seldom invoked, it ceases to be a credible threat essential to influence the conduct of others."

If anything, the Georgia law admired by Justice White will maintain low odds on execution, because it carries a fairly comprehensive review process, theoretically designed to remove arbitrary or discriminatory sentencing.

Yet, ironically, the supreme court's retentionists brushed aside arguments that the poor, the disadvantaged or the minority are liable to discrimination because they do not have the same opportunities as others to bargain or to obtain topflight counsel or to favorable discretion by police and prosecutors.

As it happens, of the 3,859 people executed in the U.S. since records were kept (starting in 1930) 2,066 were black.

No one has been executed since 1967, when Luis Jose Monge went to the gas chamber in Colorado for murdering his pregnant wife and three children. But there have been, of course, hundreds, probably thousands, of convictions since 1967 for what were held to be capital crimes. At the time of the court's 1972 ruling there were 631 people on death row.

Most of them got life sentences. But what of the unlucky ones on death row today? There are 29 of them in Georgia alone. Will they receive a punishment which no one else has suffered for almost a decade?

There will be continuing arguments, not only about specific cases, but also about the principles of capital punishment in spite and because of the court's latest ruling.

Clarence Darrow wrote that such arguments "are not settled by reason: they are settled by prejudices and sentiments or emotions. When they are settled, they do not stay settled, for the emotions change as new stimuli are applied."

There is little doubt that in the U.S., as in Canada, majority public opinion as sampled by polls favors the death penalty. However, prejudices, sentiments and emotions do not necessarily come into play until there is a specific case to stimulate them.

Such a case could be the murder of a president. Or it could be the execution of a man who killed a friend in an argument over $10 — such a man awaits his fate in a North Carolina jail.

In the U.S. system such arguments may, at any given time, depend on the composition of the supreme court, which at present veers toward a conservative philosophy, having three justices appointed by former president Richard Nixon and one by President Gerald Ford, all four of whom voted for retention.

Right to Life?

What happens next may well depend upon how the states interpret the finding of the court — especially Georgia. Incidentally, another admirer of Georgia's law is former governor Jimmy Carter, who is considered likely to be the country's next president.

In his statement on the court's findings, Justice Stewart said that "the existence of capital punishment was accepted by the framers of the constitution. And for nearly two centuries this court has recognized that capital punishment for the crime of murder is not invalid per se."

In the document which is being especially revered during the bicentennial celebrations, the Declaration of Independence, these words are found:

"We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are life ..."

Two hundred years later that is not a certainty.

Answering the Symptoms

You could describe most of the world's reaction to Israel's dramatic rescue of more than 100 hostages held by terrorists in Uganda as a collective gasp of astonishment. The word for the daring long-distance commando raid on Entebbe airport is chutzpah—a good Yiddish expression, in no way derogatory, meaning brazenness, gall, nerve.

The condemnations—from Russia, UN secretary-general Kurt Waldheim, leaders of other African nations—ring hollow. Where were they when the Air France jumbo jet was hijacked a week before? We recall no severely-worded denunciations of the crazy terrorists who endangered the lives of several hundred innocent individuals.

Refusing to bargain with terrorists is probably the best of an impossible range of choices. Appeasement is no policy at all; the demands only escalate. Cold-blooded hijackers and terrorists recognize no laws but the gun and the bomb.

Still, Israel's policy of retaliation in kind only replies to the symptoms. Why is Israel the target of air piracy and terrorist attacks?

Without going back into the incredibly tangled and confused roots of the whole Middle East dispute, Israel's present state of siege stems in large part from her aggression nine years ago, seizing land from Jordan, Egypt and Syria in the Six Day War. How does one discriminate between this kind of violence and that employed by the terrorists? Israelis themselves used similar methods of terrorism 30 years ago against the British, before there was an Israel.

Israel steadfastly refuses to recognize the fact of the Palestinians — a stateless people, like the Israelis before 1948 — who in numbers have as much right to a national identity as the Jews in Israel. Settle the Palestinian problem and you probably settle the endgame of political terrorism.

Refuse to deal with the Palestinians, and terrorism will continue. It feeds on such frozen attitudes and adamant refusal to negotiate.

Island Fever

All you mainlanders, the disease to catch this year is not swine flu but "island fever." Unless they read a mainland newspaper, Vancouver Islanders haven't seen the full-page ads the provincial government is running to attract business back to B.C. Ferries.

"Catch a ferry and catch the excitement," they say. We might add, bring your own excitement with you — the decline in summer tourist business of 30 to 40 per cent means there won't be much of that excitement born of bustling crowds of visitors.

Tourists, you'll hear no more ungrateful complaints from locals about ignorant drivers from other parts cluttering up downtown streets, plugging the parking spots.

We're singing a different song these days, with apologies to John Masefield, as the ferry crews "are laid away to rest, a little south the sunset in the Islands of the Blest" (A Ballad of John Silver).

All chime in on the chorus: "I must go down to the seas again, to the lonely sea and the sky ... Accent on 'lonely' — there's lots of room on the boats these days, men. Heed the 'wild call and a clear call that may not be denied."

Bus Routes

During the past week, in the role of parent chaperone, I accompanied a group of grade seven students on a day trip to Vancouver.

Months before embarking on this excursion, costs were ascertained and the children worked toward this goal. When ferry prices were increased June 1 this of course required double the amount budgeted for the ferry part of the trip. Due to the small size of our group, we could not afford to charter a bus nor did we qualify for group rates. Here is the low blow!

To get each child from Swartz Bay to downtown via Pacific Stage Lines cost $3.30, but to return the same child from downtown Vancouver via the same bus line would cost $5.30! This was not the price quoted from phone calls here in Victoria. Had we not stopped upon arrival to make inquiries we would not have discovered this until departure time, at which time the "kitty" would have been empty.

However, the Vancouver B.C. Hydro buses and their courteous drivers provided us with an alternate and probably little-known way back to the Tsawwassen terminal.

There is a fast bus route that will get a traveller to the ferry for 80 cents. This bus is the Deas Island 650, via Ladner and leaves Hornby and Pender Streets in Vancouver. At Ladner exchange you transfer to another bus which deposits you outside the passenger terminal entrance. The bus from Ladner leaves once an hour at 17 minutes past the hour, just nice for the next ferry. This route may sound rather complicated but having used it as a group of 16, I would not hesitate to recommend it to other travellers. — R. Smith, Victoria.

Robert Bonner, Ray Williston—"Jobs for the boys?"

Patronage

Since the WACKY days we have just about come full circle and full steam ahead! Jobs for the boys, that is the defeated candidates of the Secords. The old man took on at fat salaries and security his old pals like Lyle Wicks, Stacy, Westwood and that other chap Ron Worley who wrote of Wack's glorious achievements. And the son is following faithfully in his father's steps. Dan Campbell was given prompt and immediate employment, Robert Bonner enticed back with his fat pension from Blow-Mac and now Ray Williston is back in the saddle from his long exile after his defeat.

And how they disappeared into the woodwork. Williston must have taken the night flight out after his defeat, apparently never to return. But Bennett II felt B.C. could not possibly get along without him after his many brilliant achievements as Wack's legman. Just look at the record!

It was under Williston that Western Mines was allowed into our provincial park and who allowed logging within that park (Strathcona). It was in that same issue of the Times that Forest Minister Tom Waterland stated, quote: "Logging may soon be allowed in parks." He went on to say "B.C. is blessed with millions of acres of park and wilderness and the province can no longer afford to alienate land for single use such as parks." At which point Jim Chabot (SC) added: "We don't want more parks." So Williston will fit right into the old SC policy, "strictly commercial."

Can we look forward to having Wesley Black and Donald Brothers back on the payroll? Yes, jobs for the boys is the order of the day, no patronage, no. — A. Woods, Brentwood Bay.

Cursed Pollution

Last evening as I was trying to enjoy a bite to eat in one of our local restaurants, it came to my attention that there is a whole new type of pollution coming down hard to bear on the majority of the public today. It is a personalized hot air pollution brought on by, thank God, just a few of our younger generation. Since they are the ones who are crying "clean up the air" just maybe they had best do something to clean up their mouths and their acts in public.

As I sat there, two booths down the way from three young, long-haired, (now I'm stuck for words) males, one making a real spectacle of himself and drawing much attention to the other two as well, with a mouth as big and loud as a transatlantic foghorn repeating in dense fog, I had no choice but to listen to the conversation, as I would have had to have been wearing earplugs and earmuffs and it would only have cut the conversation by three-quarters.

I was hoping that these characters were in the minority of youth today. The conversation was about how they have beat the unemployment insurance racket since they started to work for a living. One young character claimed that he has never stayed on a job long enough to make over $1500, before he got himself fired or quit and applied for UIC. Another said that he also worked long enough just to get back on to it and the third muffled his remarks. Every second word was an ear-piercing four letter word and the last remark before they left was that no one had to work today if they knew what they were doing.

No sir, what burns my butt is that we trying to live the good life today, keep on working and paying exorbitant taxes and in some cases doing without only to keep on throwing the life-lines out into the middle of the ocean for these yokels to grab so that we can drag them in just to have them pick our pockets again.

Now somewhere, someone is absolutely crazy and I have the feeling that it is us the taxpaying idiots.

Thank goodness I myself have three young adult sons who happen to like to work for a living and do not agree with these types, but the pit of this is that the good ones never get mentioned anywhere. — Mrs. P. K. Williams, 349 Vancouver Street.

Canada's Destiny

Having read all letters on Why I am Glad to Be a Canadian, also your notebook An Uneasy Reflection, it is easy to understand your and my disappointment. However, your quotation of Sir John A. Macdonald was, I think, a masterpiece in reality.

At this point, may I quote from the Reader's Digest just a few short years ago in reference to H. G. Wells, a British historian. He told his class: "Do not dwell on the tradition of the past, but be forward looking as the world is full of opportunity." He was ostracized from society and died a lonely man.

We are and have a multinational make-up. If we are to have any respect for those people we must from necessity become a one-nation Canada. A multi-nation image just leads to a dead end road. Yes, Mr. Editor, I agree the removal of a few layers of bark is a necessity, so that Canadians can govern their own destiny. — Len Skelton, 4068 Grange Road.

'I Have Known Nothing But Whales'

By ANDREW MALCOLM

AYUKAWA, Japan—Shortly after the sun rose over the Pacific Ocean and began to burn the cool morning mists shrouding the tiny harbor here, the peaceful seaside air was shattered by the raucous sound of metal blades grinding tons of ice into splinters.

Almost immediately crowds began to gather. For such activity can mean only one thing in Ayukawa: a freshly-killed whale will soon be arriving.

The sight of a killer boat easing into port with the dark bulk of another deep-sea leviathan trussed to its side is increasingly rare here in these days of whaling quotas, government checks and international environmental attacks. It happens only about once a week now instead of several times a day as it did for many decades.

As a result, Ayukawa and other small Japanese whaling ports have fallen on difficult times. And the whalers, most of them sons and grandsons of whalers, are confused by events.

"Ever since I left high school 19 years ago," said Toshihiko Abe, a whaler, "I have known nothing but whales. And now I wonder what will happen to me and my family when this business is over. I don't understand."

What Abe and the 3,000 other Japanese engaged in whaling do understand is that each June representatives of 14 nations, only six of them engaged in deep-sea whaling, meet in London as the International Whaling Commission to determine the catch quotas for each species of whale.

The quotas, which are intended to prohibit killing of certain whale species and prevent overkilling of others, are divided between countries, and then divided between companies. Then they are further divided between factory ships, which stay at sea for months at a time, and land-station whalers like the men of Ayukawa, who return here after each catch.

The quotas have been getting smaller each year. Japan's 60,000 tons are one-tenth of what the catch was a decade ago. In May this nation's six major fisheries merged their whaling divisions into one. And in recent days only three sonar-equipped factory ships, each with three international observers, sailed for the summer season in the North Pacific whaling grounds.

This summer, the seven remaining land-station whaling boats may take 103 brydewhales, half last year's total. The share for Mr. Abe's company, Nihon Hoge, is an unprofitable 20. This catch was the fourth.

It happened at 5:30 p.m. 100 miles east of Tokyo in 6,600 feet of water. The Katsu Maru, a 400-ton ship with a crew of 22, was about to return for supplies when the lookout, Hitoshi Endo, spotted a spout four miles ahead.

The giant mammal dove to 100 feet for 20 minutes, but when it surfaced for air Isao Nihel was ready.

Like his father before him, Nihel is a harpooner. He earns $1,300 a month for his skill with the 90-millimeter cannon on the high-prowed bow of the whaler.

When the lookout identified the brydewhale's markings, Nihel's instructions on the intercom guided the craft to within 60 yards of the fleeing beast.

Nihel pulled the trigger lever. The 100-pound harpoon, hauled from the barrel. Three seconds later the whale was dead. The harpoon had pierced its brain.

It had not been necessary to use a grenade harpoon, which would have destroyed much of the valuable meat.

Quickly the crew slit the whale's body to drain the blood, remove organs susceptible to spoilage and let in the chilly sea water for natural refrigeration. A radio report was flashed to Tokyo to reduce the remaining quota by one. And the ship headed for here.

This 300-year-old city of 10,000 people circles a tiny cove in Japan's pine-clad coast 300 miles northeast of Tokyo. "Our mainstay has always been whaling," said Mayor Satoshi Watanabe, who now encourages the tourist business.

"It's been our whole life." The town's welcome sign is topped by a whale. School classes pen letters to fathers at sea. The shops are full of whale crafts — shoe horns, chopsticks, paperweights, earrings, bracelets and wallets.

And the food stores carry fresh whale meat — both the salted white layers and the dark red meat, which is fried, eaten like steaks or consumed in raw slivers that taste vaguely like beef.

Whale meat has been a staple of these islands' diet for centuries. It is part of the bounty harvested from the rich surrounding seas, which have meant to the Japanese what the vast fertile prairies have meant to Americans.

According to the Japan Whaling Association, this country gets about seven per cent of its animal proteins from whale meat.

Demand has slipped somewhat in recent years as supplies decreased and prices climbed. But Japan still imports thousands of tons from the Soviet Union, which with this country takes about 80 per cent of each year's worldwide whale harvest and from South Korea which has refused to abide by any whaling quotas.

Still, much of the criticism of whaling has been aimed at Japan by environmentalists in Canada and the United States, which operated whaling boats until 1971 and promoted the revival of Japan's whaling industry after the Second World War.

"We agree on the need for regulation," said Teruo Ono, a whaler here, "but it is so hard to understand the charges that there are only a few whales left. We see many, many whales."

"Naturally, we feel sorry over the death of animals," added Abe, whose two brothers are whalers too. "Our emotional attachment to whales is the same as an American feels for the cow when he eats hamburger. Our islands are very small, so we must get our foods from outside. And I point out that no one is more concerned with conservation of resources than those of us who must depend on them forever."

New York Times

Reagan vs. Ford: New Wealth vs. Old Wealth

By WILLIAM V. SHANNON
New York Times

The prolonged competition between President Ford and former governor Reagan has the quality of a death struggle.

The ferocity has an enigmatic quality. Since there are hardly any serious philosophical differences between them it is difficult at first glance to understand why their respective candidacies arouse such destructive antagonisms. Surely it cannot be simply a desire to replace an amiable, rather dull incumbent with a more polished and effective campaigner?

To understand the intensity of this contest, one has to look beyond the candidates to the respective factions for which they are as much figureheads as leaders.

Ford has the backing of the experienced, worldly-wise Republicans of the Northeast and the industrial Middle West.

The businessmen in these regions have for a long time been coming to terms with the power of big government and big labor and the rise of blacks and other minorities. Their most skillful politicians — Nelson Rockefeller, Clifford Case, Charles Mathias, Charles Percy — have learned to breast the tides of liberalism and keep aloft.

The raw, newly-rich Republicanism of the South, the Southwest and the Far West condemns the power of the federal government, would smash the labor unions if it could, and remains reluctant to share any real power with the racial minorities. Rather than admiring Rockefeller-Percy Republicanism as a triumph of adaptation and survival, Sunbelt Republicans view it as a species of betrayal. How can the Republican conventional wisdom of Houston and Phoenix seem like fantasy in Pittsburgh and Detroit?

REAGAN
... sunbelt strengthFORD
... last of line?

One reason is that steel, coal, automobiles and other northern industries are labor-intensive while the oil and petrochemicals of the Southwest are not. Other industries such as textiles moved south precisely to escape unions. Thus, northern businessmen routinely take account of unionized labor relations and union-backed politicians while their counterparts in the South and Southwest do not. Another factor is old vs. new wealth. Many Reagan backers made their fortunes in the last 30 years out of the fantastic growth of Texas, Arizona and California. They are land speculators, housing contractors, shopping centre developers, and fast-food franchisers. Although a disinterested observer might think that much of their wealth was merely the social increment produced by a rapidly growing population, the newly rich naturally perceive it as the result of their own perspicacity, hard work and moral virtue.

When a region is so visibly growing rich, the many who share only modestly in the affluence are nevertheless encouraged to hope that they, too, may do as well. Consequently, when Reagan invokes the virtues of individualism and self-reliance, he gets a response from many ordinary people in the Sunbelt.

Those values also persist among all classes in the older regions. But they are necessarily somewhat diluted among Eastern Republicans who are the third- or fourth-generation rich. Such people cannot quite fancy themselves as dashing, self-made individualists as do the up-from-the-cotton-farm entrepreneurs of Texas and California. Self-reliance is all very well, but 'grandfather's trust fund is a great comfort, too.

Ford, who has willingly subscribed to every article in the Reaganites' credo, remains perplexed by his failure to assuage their ideological passion. Aside from the deficiencies of his political style, Ford suffers from two fundamental errors that he made in his first month in office.

The first was the Nixon parson, which squandered the goodwill of many independent voters. His second error was to choose Rockefeller as his vice-president without adopting a 'New York strategy.'

Rockefeller is the object of obsessive hatred among party conservatives. Selecting him made sense only if Ford was prepared to follow the Rockefeller approach — an expansionist economic policy, an alliance with the construction unions, a courtship of blacks, some help for the aging cities, and a generally innovative style on every big problem from health care to energy.

Such a strategy offered the president a fighting chance that he might carry the Northeast and the Middle West as Rockefeller four times carried New York. He would then have the one argument that would overpower his opponents, namely that he can be elected and his opponent cannot.

Straight and Narrow

russell baker

Aged 20 years in 1776, he decided to sit out the revolution. It was too radical. Hotheads on the left trying to overthrow the government. Hangmen on the right burning with duty-to-King talk. It wasn't his kind of politics. He was a middle-of-the-road man, a moderate. "The middle-of-the-road, that's where the future lies," he always said, and when a polltaker asked him whether he favored King George or George Washington, he said he was undecided.

Aged 31 in 1787, he took the middle-of-the-road view of the Constitutional Convention. As he saw it, the people who wanted a union were hellbound for big government while the people who wanted a confederation of states were going to end up with government so little it wouldn't work. As a middle-of-the-road man, he wanted something in between, and when the polltaker asked him if he favored a union or a confederation, he said he was undecided.

Through the age of 94 to 104, he took the middle-of-the-road position on slavery. While it was wrong to enslave people, he said, it was also wrong to take away people's property, which is what the slaves were, and when a polltaker asked him if he was for or against slavery he said he wished the polltaker wouldn't force him to make up his mind.

Although he was 105 when the Civil War began, he was still as beautifully preserved as a youth of 20. This was because he had always sat out every difficulty in the middle of the road and, so, had neither wrinkles nor faded. Since he was as good as new, someone observed, he would surely want to fight for the great cause.

"I will indeed," he said, "as soon as I decide what the great cause is." Preserving the Union was all right, he said, but go-swept by dangerous revolutionary convulsions. The safe policy was to wait for the war to go away, and when a polltaker asked him if he thought the war was right or wrong, he said he was undecided.

Aged 93 in 1849, he did not sit out the migration to California, but he didn't go all the way to California either. Illinois seemed far enough for a moderate, middle-of-the-road location on the maps he had studied, and as he explained to everybody, "While I may not find any gold there, I won't starve to death either while crossing the desert."

By 1917, he had been sitting things out for 141 years and, although many of his neighbors went off to the First World War, he sat that out too.

This year he became 220 years old and recently when a polltaker asked him whom he favored for President, he said he was undecided. Most of the interesting people he knew when young are gone. They all wore themselves out in wild-eyed non-moderate activities. Not him. He still looks young and unused, though a slight sadness begins to show around his eyes.

Recently I asked him if this sadness was caused by the knowledge that by having always been undecided about the direction America should take, he had left all the great adventures to the few who knew what they wanted. He said he was unb.c. briefsSasquatch Near Bella Coola?

BELLA COOLA (CP) — A sasquatch was reportedly sighted last week near this Coastal range town, according to the United States-based North American Wildlife Research Association.

A local resident says he was followed down a river by a sasquatch. When he went back to check, he found footprints 16½ inches long.

There have been reports of sasquatch sightings in the wilds of the Pacific Northwest for the past 75 years. The animals are thought to be furry, ape-like creatures about eight feet tall with broad hands and feet.

The sighting here has prompted a sasquatch expedition by two NAWRA members, Roy Lack, an 11-year veteran sasquatch tracker, and Jerry Jarstrom. Both men are from Medford, Ore.

The two men will gather photographic evidence to verify the sighting. They will also take plaster casts of any footprints and set up a watch station to monitor any further sasquatch activity.

Miners Strike

POWELL RIVER (CP) — Members of three unions went on strike Tuesday at Texada Mines Ltd. near here. About 150 workers, members of the Teamsters, the Operating Engineers' Union, and the Tunnel and Rock Workers' Union, voted 49 to 40 in favor of strike action, then set up picket lines.

The unions are asking for a $1-an-hour increase during the first six months of a new contract. The mine apparently has offered 30 cents an hour, and suggested leaving wages open to further discussion at the end of the year.

Development Plan

VANCOUVER (CP) — A $35-million development proposal for Robson Street has been preliminary approval by the city's development board. The proposal, for a combined residential-commercial centre, is designed to cover almost half the block.

Man Charged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Douglas Robert McCallum, 29, of Vancouver, was ordered Tuesday to stand trial in higher court on a charge of murder punishable by life imprisonment in the shooting death of Geraldine Ann Forster, 19, and a student at the B.C. Institute of Technology, in June, 1973. The high court trial was ordered following preliminary hearing in provincial court.

Election Changes

BURNABY (CP) — Council has approved changes in municipal elections which will have the entire council, mayor and aldermen elected every two years. The biennial elections will begin in 1977 for the complete council and school board.

Quake Kills 274

GENEVA (Reuter) — The League of Red Cross Societies said Tuesday that 274 persons were killed and 30 were reported missing after an earthquake June 26 in the Irian island of Indonesian New Guinea. League headquarters said 30,000 people were affected by the quake in an 11,500-square-mile area.

Trial Ordered

VANCOUVER (CP) — Kenneth Pocha, 32, of Vancouver was charged Tuesday with four counts of robbery after three banks and a trust company were held up during the past two months. He was arrested Monday shortly after a man held up a downtown branch of Canada Permanent Trust and escaped with $600.

Body Found

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — The body of a man aged about 38 was discovered Tuesday at the edge of a log boom in the Annacis Island Slough. New Westminster police said the body was spotted by a passerby. Identity of the body was not released.

Brawler Fined

ASHCROFT (CP) — James Bernard Macdonald, 21, of MacKenzie, B.C., was sentenced to 60 days in prison after pleading guilty in provincial court here Tuesday to a charge of resisting arrest in connection with a brawl June 25.

He was fined $150 on a charge of creating a disturbance, and was placed on 18-months probation.

Macdonald was one of five Ashcroft Stampede carnival workers who were charged after nearly 30 persons battled on a downtown street.

DISRUPTED MAIL MOVING

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mail delayed by the recent disruption of air services now is moving through the Vancouver post office.

About 10,000 Canadian National Railways pensioners living in the Vancouver area got their June cheques Tuesday. The cheques arrived in Vancouver Monday loaded on 13 rail piggy-back trucks.

About 200,000 other people served from the Vancouver Post Office will receive mail from Montreal, Toronto and other Ontario points today.

Skagitonians Seek Support From Canada

VANCOUVER (CP) — A committee opposing nuclear power plants in Washington State wants support from British Columbia residents.

Ann McMillan, a member of Skagitonians Concerned About Nuclear Plants, said at a meeting here Tuesday that a proposed nuclear plant 60 miles south of Vancouver could trigger a disaster.

The plant, three miles east of Sedro Woolley, 30 miles south of the Canada-United States border, was to have been started this year.

The American group specifically asked for support at hearings on the feasibility of the project that opens today in Seattle.

The group says that British Columbians should be concerned because the plant site is prone to earthquakes, the prevailing wind flows toward Vancouver, and tides take the Skagit River water — which is the proposed nuclear coolant — toward Canada.

Lewis Meets Hecklers Head On at SFU Lecture

... grew angry

BURNABY (CP) — Former New Democratic Party national leader David Lewis met a protest faction head on Tuesday when he began work as a summer session lecturer at Simon Fraser University.

Lewis scolded the protesters and then completed his lecture on Canadian political science to applause and cheering from the majority of the audience in the lecture hall at the university's academic quadrangle.

He was interrupted at the start of his lecture by Tom Conroy, who said he was a spokesman for a group questioning the propriety of Lewis appearing on campus in view of a continuing academic boycott of the university.

The group says Lewis should have refused the job of guest lecturer at SFU's summer session, respecting a Canadian Association of University Teachers' boycott stemming from the firing in 1969 of eight faculty members.

Conroy, to the applause of his faction, challenged Lewis to debate the issue.

Lewis replied: "I have no intention whatever of having a debate because I have nothing to debate about."

He was at SFU to participate in the educational process, Lewis said, and he believed a majority of people at the university welcomed his presence.

When this comment was greeted by a scattering of jeers among the approximately 100 people — crowded to standing room only in the lecture hall, Lewis said:

"The bullshit is spread quite widely here."

Lewis also referred to the anti-Lewis posters on campus, including some in the lecture hall itself, one reading: "David Lewis: To teach this course is to scab. Don't do it."

"If they want to continue to put up on the walls notices about me with cartoons that flatter me, they're welcome to do so," he said.

"But I will ask those who are here for some other purpose to be sufficiently polite so I can get on with the work."

Lewis' anger grew when Conroy accused him of acting undemocratically in refusing the challenge of debate.

"I'm not preventing you from having a debate," he told Conroy. "For Christ's sake, you can get the hell out and debate for all your worth for the next year."

"Take a room, take a hall, on the university campus, off the university campus. Appear on television, speak on radio, do any damn thing you like."

"All I'm saying is that this particular audience has come here for a particular purpose, for which many people in this room have paid a fee, and I think they are entitled to have the purpose for which they came here."

Lewis proceeded with his lecture — then was interrupted again — after asking for a show of hands which, he said, carried overwhelmingly a decision to continue.

To this interruption, Lewis said: "Those who are trying to prevent us from going on are showing a social tolerance that is not good for a university or any other community."

After about 15 minutes, after shouts of "sit down, sit down," from students who had come to hear Lewis, the dissenters ended their interruptions and the lecture got under way.

B.C. Ranches Quarantined For Blue Tongue Disease

OSOYOOS, (CP) — The ranching area of southern B.C. has been closed and quarantined in an attempt to contain blue tongue disease, an agricultural department spokesman said Monday.

Veterinarian Ivan Reed said about 15,000 head will be affected by the quarantine.

Reed, a member of the health of animals branch, said: "When you count the calves and heifers, it is more than double that number."

He said blue tongue disease is a viral infection of ruminants and is particularly dangerous to sheep, but it can cause deformed fetuses and a sore mouth and feet in cattle.

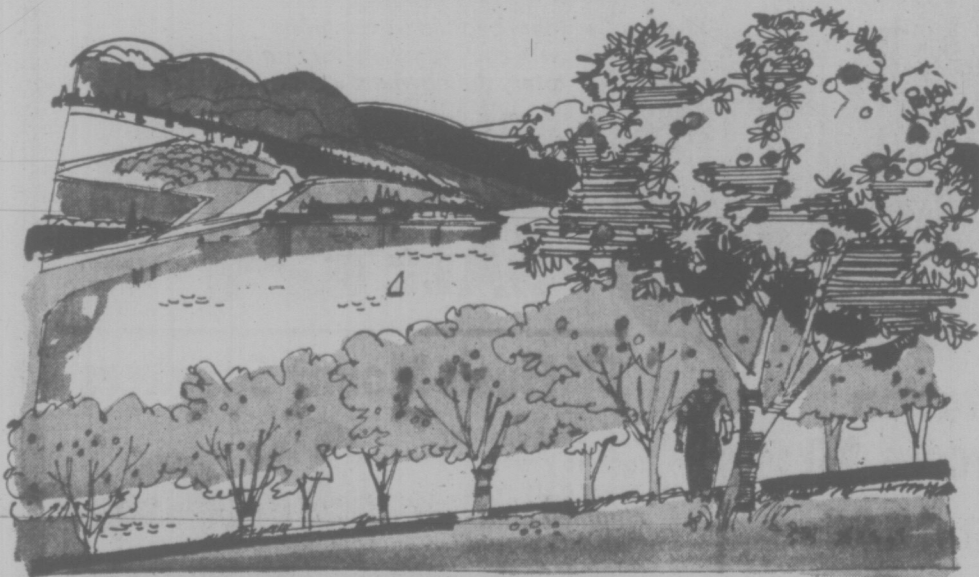

Reed said no beef may be exported to the U.S. from the quarantined area and no semen from bulls may leave the country.

Reed said all cattle in the area will be tested and infected animals slaughtered and their owners compensated.

The quarantine area runs for about 50 miles along the Canada-U.S. border. It stretches from the Asinola River north to a point five miles west of Hedley, then east to Kaleden.

From there, the quarantine line travels north along the east side of Okanagan Lake to Gook Creek. It then turns east to Mile 13 on Highway 33 and south through Rock Creek to the border.

Ever think of Peachland as a mining town?

With its lakeshore setting, encircled by fruit orchards, Peachland has for many years been one of the Okanagan's most scenic centres. When the Brenda Mine opened in 1969, the town retained all of its basic charm ... while gaining important economic benefits.

About half of the mine's employees and their families became residents of Peachland. New homes were built... the town's merchants gained new business from the mine and its employees... and the influx of young families was one reason for construction of a new school.

Fruit farmers in the district also benefited when the company built a large, earth-filled dam to supply water for the mine. Beyond serving the mine's water requirements, the new dam has allowed a great increase in the supply of water for irrigation and domestic use. The reservoir is called Peachland Lake and includes boat-launching facilities and lakeshore picnic sites for the use of local residents.

The mine, located 18 miles northwest of town, is a major producer of copper and molybdenum. It provides jobs for 435 people, and also supports many others in service industries dependent on mining.

The Brenda Mine has been good for Peachland and good for B.C. It's one more example of how mining utilizes a natural resource for the benefit of our whole province.

65 New Jobs for the Island

Decision of Trident Aircraft Ltd. of Richmond to begin assembly of small amphibian planes at Sidney in January will create 65 new jobs for the Island and help reverse the flow of industries.

During the past two years, the Island had lost at least 300 jobs because of decisions to move to the lower mainland. There were 66 lost when Bapco moved its paint plant from Victoria to Surrey in 1974 and 170 are being lost as Ocean Cement phases out its cement plant at Bamberton and moves to Delta. A number of smaller companies have also gone to the mainland.

Trident president David Hazwood said he was pleased his company is able to reverse the flow of industrial jobs.

"We needed a site where we could test our planes in the water at all times in the year and Sidney was the only suitable site. We will be employing 65 people, mostly from British Columbia," he said.

The company will transfer 15 present employees from the lower mainland and in addition will shift its headquarters to Sidney. Trident is a B.C. company with shares trading publicly. It has about 60 shareholders but only two on the Island at present.

Trident will assemble the Trigull 320 plane which seats from four to six people.

Parts will be manufactured on the lower mainland by Canadian Aircraft production and transported by trailer or barge to Sidney to be assembled. The assembly production line will be in a hangar owned by the provincial government.

First plane should be completed by late summer, 1977, and production will be between 72 and 100 planes per year. The Trigull 320 is useful as a patrol plane for the forest industry as well as for company officials, Hazelwood said.

He said he expected the bulk of the orders to come from private enterprise. Price tag will be about $80,000.

The federal government has granted the company $1.5 million to assist with design and production of the plane, of which about $350,000 must be paid back.

In addition, the provincial government is loaning the company a maximum of $300,000 to assist with start-up costs.

The company is carrying out studies at the Sidney site and it should be ready to receive the first shipment of plane parts from the mainland by January.

3 Months For Attack With Glass

NANAIMO — Alfred John Nicholls, 30, of 320 Harewood Road, Tuesday was sentenced to three months in jail after pleading guilty earlier to a charge of assault causing bodily harm.

The charge followed an incident in a southend Nanaimo beer parlour in the early morning of June 12. Court was told that Nicholls approached a table in the room, broke a beer glass and jammed it into the face of his former common-law wife.

The woman suffered severe facial cuts which included the severing of a major artery in the woman's upper neck. Prosecutor Jack Caldwell said the injury could have been "much more serious" but for quick work by Const. R. J. Van Gerven of Nanaimo RCMP whose actions in keeping an air passage clear, prevented the woman from choking to death on her own blood.

YOUTH CHARGED IN MOTEL FIRE

COURTENAY — A 17-year-old Courtenay youth was to appear in provincial court today charged with arson in a fire that destroyed one unit of an abandoned auto court Monday.

The Courtenay Auto Court had been empty for about two months at the time of the fire, said Keith Fraser, a spokesman for the owner, Fraser Construction of Duncan.

The buildings, located on densely overgrown property, have been targets of vandalism in recent weeks.

A spokesman for the Courtenay volunteer fire department said the dampness of the surrounding grass helped prevent the flames from spreading to other units and nearby residences. There was no estimate of damage.

Municipalities Seeking a Way Of Getting Their Cash Back

The inter-municipal committee is trying to devise means by which organizations which receive grants in lieu of taxes must return them if they sell or lease their property.

Saanich's finance, legislative and health committee studied a proposal Tuesday which would have such organizations signing an agreement when such grants are given that they will return the monies when their properties are sold or leased.

For the purpose of the agreement, the grants will be legally termed as "loans." Saanich municipal solicitor Doug Patterson will be asked to rule on the legality of the agreement, forwarded to the various municipalities by Slim Crisp on behalf of the inter-municipal committee.

"It would be nice to see some of the money come back to the people in the community," Ald. Fred Severson observed Tuesday.

Chairman Ald. David Paterson, who represents Saanich on the inter-municipal committee, reported the action is being considered to ensure some of the public money is returned when it is no longer needed.

"The Boy Scouts of Canada, in Esquimalt sold their property and made quite a lot of money and nothing came back," Paterson said.

Ald. Roy Wootton said the organization had also sold their property on West Saanich Road in Saanich.

"They sold to the water board, which we help pay for," he added.

Ald. Joe Bourque said he couldn't see any organization objecting to the proposed terms and Paterson remarked, "I don't think societies or municipalities are looking to sham each other."

Comptroller-treasurer Roy Broughton cautioned, "The inter-municipal committee is not a legal entity. Each municipality each year should have to sign an agreement... that's just a technicality."

Broughton also said if an organization sold in order to relocate elsewhere the question of returning in-lieu-of-taxes money could be compounded.

REBATE COMING? BETTER ASK

Ten Saanich or ex-Saanich residents are owed rebates in sewer taxes but they're going to have to apply to get them.

Comptroller-treasurer Roy Broughton told Tuesday's meeting of the finance, legislative and health committee that there had been 40 properties involved last Jan. 27 when council decided to refund sewer taxes to residents whose properties they were unable to service with sewers.

The property-owners had been paying sewer taxes in anticipation since 1969.

The 10 outstanding rebates belong to residents who have sold their homes and moved prior to the decision to refund the taxes.

"If they apply for it they'll get it," Broughton said, adding it is difficult to trace them because they may be in the Greater Victoria area or in some other part of Canada by now.

On the recommendation of Broughton, the committee decided to give a $147.74 refund to Mrs. M. A. Hickman, who had sold her home at 1096 West Burnside in August, 1973, and had written Saanich requesting a rebate for the period from 1969 to that time.

Langley Suspect Slain

LANGLEY (CP) — The man shot and killed by police in an incident at a Langley house Monday night has been identified as Paul Nikolic, 32.

The incident began when an RCMP constable answered a complaint of indecent assault on a nine-year-old girl, and was told by the girl's mother that the man responsible for the indecent assault, a resident of the house, had a 10-inch knife.

The constable tried to talk to Nikolic in the house and was attacked with the knife.

The constable then left the house and called for assistance, while the mother and two children escaped.

Police say Nikolic then came out of the house carrying the knife and a .303 rifle which was pointed at two police officers.

Police fired two warning shots but the armed man kept on advancing with his rifle pointing at the two police officers.

Police then fired four shots, three of which struck Nikolic in the lower body. The wounded man advanced on a police car and smashed the windshield.

Police then disarmed Nikolic and he was taken to hospital, where he died Tuesday morning.

No shots were fired by Nikolic.

Winnipeg Casino Plan Off

WINNIPEG (CP) — The city of Winnipeg Tuesday shelved, at least for the time being, a proposal to establish a gambling casino at the Winnipeg convention centre.

The move followed receipt of a report by two councillors promoting the proposal, Lorne Leech and Ed Kotowich, recommending no action be taken until, and if, federal Criminal Code changes permit such a move.

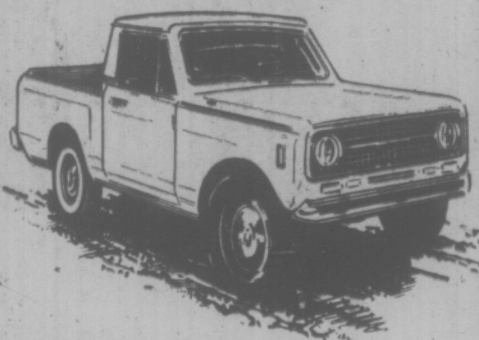

The two councillors, accompanied by police chief Norman Stewart, visited Las Vegas recently to get a first-hand look at gambling controls in the city.

Chief Stewart said the trip did nothing to change his opposition to legalized gambling in Winnipeg. He said he was certain organized crime would move into the city, and gambling would lead to increase crime, drug abuse and family problems.

Unionists Protest

WELLINGTON (Reuter) — New Zealand trade unionists will refuse to handle South African cargoes shipped to or from New Zealand for a five-week period starting Monday. The Federation of Labor described the ban as a protest against "the murderous attacks on women and children at Soweto" and the apartheid policies of the South African government.

PAPER EXPLAINS N.S. ANGER

HALIFAX (CP) — The Chronicle-Herald said Tuesday it has placed full-page advertisements in a number of Canadian newspapers to inform Canadians outside Nova Scotia on the background and implications of this province's entry into confederation.

The newspaper said in a statement that Nova Scotia became "a disadvantaged province" shortly after confederation in 1867 and that has remained so since that time "under national policy."

For this reason, Nova Scotia has "a strong interest in the impact upon her economy and the well-being of her citizens which may flow from future changes in national public policy and especially in protecting her presently known and potential natural resources."

The newspaper recently published a series of four articles on the implications of confederation on Nova Scotia. It reproduced these articles in the advertisement placed in other newspapers this week.

The Halifax newspaper said the articles "appear to bear on points affecting the economic position of Nova Scotia in the future and, in turn, to have national significance in the light of the discussions now proceeding."

All the Papers 'Confidential'

OTTAWA (CP) — Walter Rudnicki, former Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation official, lost his job because of a CMHC policy that almost every document be marked confidential, Rudnicki's lawyer said Tuesday in the second day of a trial for wrongful dismissal.

"It is our position that the fact someone writes confidential on a document does not make it so," he told the court.

Rudnicki, an 18-year civil service veteran, was dismissed three years ago as CMHC policy planning director for allegedly showing a cabinet document on native housing to some native representatives. He now is suing the corporation for unspecified damages.

CMHC president William Teron said Rudnicki had displayed "indiscretion and lack of judgment" in showing them the document. The government claims he prejudiced its position and broke his oath of secrecy.

Rudnicki says the document was merely a rough policy draft for Ron Basford, then urban affairs minister. Basford has agreed to testify at the trial.

Barney Danson, the present urban affairs minister, has invoked a special executive privilege, arguing the document should not be made public because it relates to policy matters.

But Rudnicki's lawyer says the court must examine the document.

Mr. Justice John O'Driscoll has reserved decision on its admissibility.

Tony Belcourt, former president of the Native Council of Canada and one of those to whom Rudnicki showed the document at a meeting, testified Tuesday that Teron and Basford both had promised Metis and non-status Indians they would be consulted.

Belcourt said that as far as he knew what was shown him was not a cabinet document.

He told the court the owner was titled Rural and Native Housing Policy and was stamped as a draft memorandum to cabinet.

"It was my understanding it was just a final proposal drafted by Mr. Rudnicki and his staff," he said.

Helicopter Fatalities

YELLOWKNIFE (CP) — Canadian armed forces search and rescue officials here identified three men killed in a weekend helicopter crash in the Northwest Territories.

Pilot Mike MacDonnell of Calgary and his passengers John McQuinn of Calgary and William Hill of Vancouver were reported missing in their five-seat helicopter Friday.

The downed craft, owned by Klondike Helicopters of Calgary, was located by a Canadian Forces Twin Otter.

Computers May Analyse Water Works

The question wasn't whether the project was a good one but where it should be tried out first.

And for that reason Victoria council's road and underground services committee Tuesday tabled a proposal by city engineer John Sansom to set up a computer analysis system of the city water works.

Sansom suggested James Bay as a pilot project, recommending the task be carried out by the consultant engineering firm Willis, Cunniff, Tait and Co. Ltd. The cost, he said, would be $6,725.

If the computer system worked there — and he assured it had been successfully employed in many other cities — it might be applied city-wide. The ultimate cost — about $40,000.

He told committee members a computer would give fast and accurate answers to problems arising within the water system.

He called it a "tool to predict future demands," and said it would give information on water pressures and capacities at any point in the system; helping planners decide when and where future development should take place.

Mayor Mike Young referred to the water system as "the poor sister of our services," and agreed it needed a thorough assessment.

But Ald. John Hayes questioned the choice of James Bay as the area to carry out the pilot study.

He felt the "eastern regions" of the city would be more appropriate, arguing that was where most of the city's growth was occurring.

Sansom said James Bay was selected because the work could be carried out there without major interruption of service.

Ald. Bob Wright asked if there were any major water problems in James Bay and Sansom replied there were not, although occasional pressure problems crop up every now and then.

Ald. Alf Hood concurred with Hayes and suggested that if there was to be a pilot project "it should be in an area where it is most applicable."

The matter was referred back to Sansom for further study.

Job Scene Improves

There are still 2,500 to 3,000 students listed as looking for work but with summer well under way the job picture is looking a little brighter, Student Manpower director Anne Walker said Tuesday.

Her office has filled 1,015 jobs to date this season, she said.

Just how many young people still want work remains somewhat of a question because when some of them are phoned with a job opportunity, it turns out they are already working or have gone to summer school. They don't always remember to advise her office.

At present, jobs to be filled are being phoned in by employers at an average of about 30 a day and that's a distinct improvement over the 15 or so a day of a couple of weeks ago.

Some of the work is short-term, provided by households who want someone to paint the house or mow the lawn.

About half the calls are for jobs which will take the balance of the summer, she said.

Pay varies from a minimum of $2.90 an hour ("Not many of them") to close to $7 an hour for some of the municipal laboring positions. Anne estimates the average would be about $3.50 an hour.

The situation looked much grimmer a month or more ago, with an estimated 4,500 students from high school and university looking for work.

At the moment, the job picture for students looks about as it did a year ago, she said, perhaps even a little better.

The office produces all kinds of jobs, from special constable to cow milker to municipal archivist. The depressed tourist industry hasn't been producing as many jobs and this has had an indirect effect as well, with small businesses which cater to tourists not hiring as much help either.

A provincial labor department grant of $433,000 helped some small businesses and farmers hire students as well as municipalities. Saanich has 82 students on its payroll, Victoria 53, Oak Bay about 50 and Esquimalt 31. Many are operating playgrounds and others working for parks or public works departments.

One of the fears expressed earlier was that university students unable to find work this summer could not afford to return to their studies.

Walker said she believes that it is the younger high school student with little experience to offer, and probably a few more girls than boys, having the most trouble getting summer jobs.

But she said if they are really keen they won't give up. They should check the job bulletin board at the Student Manpower office at least daily. That's on the second floor at 546 Yates St.

Employers with jobs to be filled can call 382-4832.

ESCAPING GAS PEEVES PEOPLE

City council's public works department will monitor the noise level at a gas-passing plant that's peevish Dallas Road residents.

Harold Sawyer, spokesman for Canadian Liquid Air Ltd., 90 Dallas Road, said the noise, which he described as "like a loud wind caused by gas escaping" is caused by oxygen and nitrogen being forced from lines during the plant's start-up.

Engineers, he told Tuesday's weekly council caucus meeting, are trying to find ways of muffling the noise. Council sympathized with the residents when they learned the noise occurs at least one day a month at 4 a.m. for 20 to 30 minutes.

Sawyer agreed to a request that the company not start up in future before 8 a.m.

Region Board Will Battle Developers

By DON VIFOND
Times Staff

Chairman Jim Campbell said Tuesday the Capital Region Board will try for the third time to find some way of stopping major developers from riding roughshod over community plans for Oakwood and Langford.

The board's second effort failed with word from Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis last week that he would not support a regional bylaw introducing a temporary land freeze over about 1,500 acres in the so-called "western community."

Campbell said that decision appears to leave half a dozen major developers owning land in the area to "go their own way, just as everyone else have been doing out there for so long — screwing it about."

The chairman said he is seeking an immediate meeting with Curtis in hopes the minister can be persuaded to change his mind.

What the regional board wants to do is impose a temporary development freeze until a community plan and zoning bylaw are enacted, likely late this year.

It failed to persuade the provincial government to take such a step through its environment and land use committee earlier this year. Now it has been unable to persuade Curtis to support a regional bylaw doing the same thing. Such bylaws must have provincial approval before they can be finally enacted.

In a letter to Campbell the municipal affairs minister said he is not prepared to be a party to halting development proposals already under way because the regional board neglected to take adequate steps earlier to control growth.

Campbell said today that explanation doesn't stand up because the courts have made it clear developers whose plans are in fact under way can't be halted by such bylaws.

What seems to have happened, he said, is some developers have drawn some plans, indicating some intentions without actually making any substantial investment, and they are upset at the thought of being restricted by a community plan and zoning which would insist on green space and proper sewerage.

Campbell said one effect of development going ahead outside proper area planning is that subdivisions would go in with septic tanks and homeowners would be most reluctant to later pay their share of a proper sewage collection system.

The chairman said the regional board has not asked the province to halt any development that was literally under way.

"We're interested in making sure the best possible development takes place in that area."

SCANP FOLK THINK SO

Is Atomic Plant B.C.'s Concern?

Finally, we have an ear if not a voice.

And that's a measure of success, at least. For what is being debated and what is being decided could greatly affect the future of us all — in Victoria, in British Columbia and, in fact, in all of Canada.

You may not have heard much about it, but today over in Seattle the first of two final hearings, which will determine whether the Skagit Nuclear Power Project will go ahead or will be scrapped, are being held.

But that's in Washington, you say. That's not in B.C. And you're right, geographically. For that's what too many people up here have been saying for too long.

For three years now, the people of SCANP (Skagitians Concerned About Nuclear Plants) have fought through every level of hearings to stop the project, represented by Puget Power, Bechtel Corporation, the oil companies which have invested in uranium, and the General Electric-Westinghouse electrical consortium.

But they have fought alone. In the three years of hearings, B.C. has never had a representative attend nor has even been consulted. SCANP has been doing its best to make people here aware of the nearness of the proposed plant and, at last, we are starting to realize we are involved whether we like it or not.

A few days ago, I met Ann McMillan who lives a mere 10 miles from the planned site in the Skagit Valley and who describes herself as a sort of ambassador for SCANP.

She spent the day hanging around the Legislative Buildings trying to meet as many MLAs as possible and generally putting pressure on the government to get B.C. involved in the final hearings.

She explained that Puget Power proposes to build at least two huge nuclear power reactors near Sedro-Wooley in Washington and that SCANP has considerable evidence showing the site is totally unsuitable for such a risky endeavor.

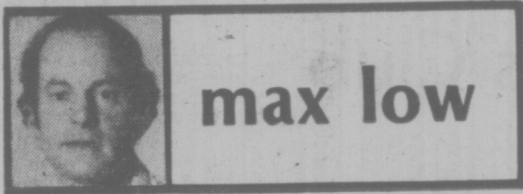

The entire Pacific Northwest area is a major earthquake zone and SCANP's consultant geologist Dr. Eric Cheney of the University of Washington has found a major earthquake fault line within nine miles of the plant site," Ann said.

Also, she pointed out, the site is 15 miles from Mt. Baker and the volcanic activity there has been greatly increased lately.

We in B.C. may not realize it but the site chosen is at mere 32 air miles from the Canadian border and the prevailing wind conditions are to the north 70 to 80 per cent of the time. According to SCANP, the size of the plant indicates that the radioactive inventory at full production will be equivalent to that from several thousand Hiroshima-size bombs. An earthquake, a volcanic eruption or a nuclear accident could result in vast amounts of radioactivity being spread into the atmosphere, resulting in the contamination of the environment and endangering life in a large area of the north-west.

While the hearings went on today in the Federal Building in Seattle, SCANP protesters were outside.

And inside, Samuel Jensen, chairman of the Atomic Safety and Licensing Board on the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) received a telegram from CASE (Citizens Association to Save the Environment) in Victoria. It read:

"Sir, this association, one of the largest environmental groups in B.C., is deeply concerned about the proposed development of two atomic reactors in Washington State close to the Canadian border. We sincerely urge you and members of your commission to exhibit environmental integrity and, with a humanism that will be applauded by millions, to oppose and prohibit these reactor developments that will pose a threat to present and future lives in both Washington State and B.C."

"Sir, if your terms of reference enable you to strongly advocate overt energy conservation that will eliminate the need for these diabolical reactors, we will strongly support you and we will similarly support any level of government exhibiting the same attitudes."

So far, our government isn't exhibiting any attitudes. But it is paying attention, thanks to SCANP and the people of B.C. And that's encouraging.

During a three-week vigil at the recent Habitat Forum in Vancouver, SCANP gathered the signatures of more than 1,200 British Columbians who paid 50 cents each toward telegrams sent to Premier Bennett demanding B.C. participation in the NRC hearings in Seattle.

Of course, politicians can't resist a bit of back-passing. But, as I said before, a measure of success was achieved. Bennett referred the matter to Environment Minister Jim Nielson who in turn informed SCANP president Ron Carstens that "it's not our policy to make presentations to hearings held by foreign governments on matters coming within their jurisdiction."

"Any representations," Nielson's letter to Carstens continued, "should more properly be made at the national level where Canadian interests could be involved."

"This does not mean that we have no concern over such developments and the possible effect on B.C. and to keep ourselves informed on this matter we will be sending an expert on air pollution, W. T. Morecraft from the department of environment, as an observer."

So there you have it — an ear at last.

And that was the result of public pressure.

It will be that same kind of pressure, Ann McMillan believes, that will cause the NRC to decide in the people's favor and scrap the proposed project. But, she said, the fight has been a long one. SCANP survives on donations and anyone wishing to help should write to Carstens at P.O. Box 331 Anacortes.

The last hearing will be in Seattle on Aug. 17. After that, the NRC will make its decision; Puget Power and Bechtel will begin building; or they will go home and leave the Valley alone.

Ann hopes and believes it will be the latter. But she says SCANP needs more support and more help to make sure.

"This is a situation where it's possible for the people to win," she says.

"Usually, in such a situation, the odds are so big that people feel lost and are defeated."

"But this time we have a strong, a very strong, case... and we can win!"

Halibut Vies With Caviar

By FAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Halibut, once a humble fish adored by those with a penchant for fish and chips, is getting as costly as caviar.

It could also become as scarce.

Fish processing plants are caught in the squeeze of rising costs and are reluctant to buy more than they need.

Oakland Industries on Montreal, as an example, stopped buying halibut two weeks ago.

General manager Peter Wilson reports the company has sufficient to supply its customers but high prices being paid fishermen this year make it unprofitable for the processing plants.

"We're paying them twice what we did last year," Wilson reported.

Fishermen receive $1.38 per pound, Wilson explained that Oaklands sells fresh halibut to its customers at $1.75 a pound and frozen, $1.85 per pound.

The difference is less than half the markup in retail outlets.

At Woodward's, as an example, halibut steaks were selling at $2.95 a pound while halibut pieces were priced at $2.89 a pound.

Operators of local fish and chipperies are also being hard pushed by the spiralling costs of fish.

Charles LaVertu uses nothing but halibut in his London Fish and Chip Cafe on Pandora.

The price of fish went up again last week but Vertu says, "We will try to absorb the increase for the time being... I try to keep my head above water."

When LaVertu started in 1970 a single serving of fish and chips cost 80 cents and take-out orders were priced at 35 cents. Now one serving costs $2.25 and affords a minimal profit.

The International Pacific Halibut Commission in Seattle has set a catch limit of 25 million pounds this year. About 12 million pounds had been landed by June 30.

Victoria Construction Slumps 16% This Year

RENTS CAUSE CONCERN

Victoria building permits during the first half of this year totalled only $30.8 million, down 16 per cent from the same period last year, the city engineering department said today.

And last year's total was unusually low because of a lockout of municipal workers at the beginning of the year.

The 1976 half-yearly total is down 20 per cent from $36.1 million in the first half of 1974.

The city issued 2,370 permits during the six months, down from 2,640 in 1974 but higher than the 1,543 issued in 1975 when the time period was shortened by the lockout.

In the six months this year, apartments, condominiums and commercial buildings accounted for most of the value of the permits. There were only 20 single family dwelling permits issued in the six months for a total value of $804,800.

There were only two industrial building permits issued for a total value of $147,440.

There were 25 apartment and condominium permits issued for a total value of $9.1 million, while 13 permits were for commercial buildings worth $1.1 million.

Electrical installation permits totalled $3.4 million and 337 permits worth $4.1 million were for repairs and alterations.

While the six-month totals were down, the June activity was fairly brisk. There were 438 permits issued during the month worth $3.8 million, well above $2.2 million last June and up slightly from $3.6 million in June, 1974.

The June permits included a total of 73 condominium units in five separate projects. In addition, a $98,000 permit for the construction of four townhouses was issued.

A total of 212 persons received assistance during the month of June at Charles Barber's community office at 1020 Blanchard.

Although the figure represents a slight decrease, office personnel said it was expected with the arrival of summer.

Housing was the main area of concern — there were numerous requests for information about low-rental housing and housing co-ops and a number of complaints about rent increases.

Another area of concern was expressed by a number of people who received requests by the human resources department that persons under 65 on Mincome report to human resources offices for their annual review and reapplication.

Community office volunteers said they reassured these people that the action is normal government policy and represents no threat to continued monthly cheques.

Barber said he will be spending more time at the offices now that the legislature is no longer in session.

Council Asks Airline To Pay Up Back Rent

Victoria Flying Services Ltd. have two weeks to pay up arrears on rent they owe for using a float plane wharf in the Inner Harbor or they could find themselves leaseless... and wharf-less.

Victoria city council's central area development committee issued that ultimatum after learning the charter airline company was $247.50 behind in its payments to the city on a sublease of the wharf.

The company has held tenancy on the wharf on a month-to-month basis at $82.50 a month since February, 1975, when their lease expired and was taken over by the city.

In a letter to city clerk Morrin Waller the company asked that the lease be renewed this month.

That raised the ire of committee members, who felt the company should either pay up or get out.

"There's no point in carrying on in any basis until they pay," Mayor Mike Young declared.

ASK THE TIMES

Q. When did Orson Welles do his famous radio broadcast about the Martians landing, and did it really cause a lot of panic?

A. It was in 1938. Welles directed the fictional broadcast about men from Mars landing in New Jersey... so realistically that thousands of alarmed listeners in the eastern U.S. flooded authorities with calls. On the strength of this sensation, Welles was hired to write, direct and act in his own films in Hollywood.

HE BEAT THE SEA

Longevity comes to a hunter naturally if he can survive the wrath of the sea, according to Chief Charlie Jones of Port Renfrew, who celebrated his 100th birthday today.

The chief, believed to be the last of the pelagic seal hunters, was trained as a boy to harpoon seals from the bow of a canoe and took part in seal hunting expeditions in the Bering seas.

"A hunter develops strong chest, arm and leg muscles," he explained. "He lives long if the sea doesn't claim him — if he remains true to his guardian spirit."

When logging was introduced in the Port Renfrew area, the logging camp at Bear Cree, about 15 miles up the San Juan River, depended on the chief for its provisions. He used to pole a canoe laden with supplies up the river.

Will Aid Fade After Olympics End?

OTTAWA (CP) — With memories of Montreal still fresh in their minds, sport officials will begin this fall mapping out plans leading to the 1980 Olympics.

And on the road to Moscow, victory in the 1978 Commonwealth Games in Edmonton and a stronger-than-ever showing in the 1979 Pan-American Games is hoped for as prizes for work that began in 1973.

But first there will be a two-to-three-month breather to rebuild body and soul from demands in preparing for the Olympic Games in Montreal.

Roger Jackson, acting director of Sport Canada, the federal agency that has been overseeing Olympic athletic preparations, said in an interview Tuesday that the first year will be a building one.

Many national teams will break up for a year and the coaches "will work with a whole series of other coaches across the country to try to develop a much broader base of coaching expertise."

They will also be looking for athletes to compete in the 1978 world championships as well as the Commonwealth Games, Jackson said, as a buildup to the 1980 Games. Selections will begin in 1977.

Faced with the Olympics in Canada for the first time, work started in 1973 to create the first national approach to athlete training, Jackson said.

Game Plan was set up to unite sport financing operations and co-ordinate athlete support and scoring standards. The result was an effort to improve competitive calibre in all 21 Olympic sports rather than directing most of the assistance to sports that had immediate potential.

However to build an international-level athletic program takes four to five years as the calibre of coaches and athletes mounts, Jackson said. He and many officials of sports governing bodies say the fruits of the labors of the last three years lie beyond Montreal.

"The pressure two years ago was to gear up a team for the 1976 Olympic Games," Jackson said. "All of the energies of the sport went into the national team. But many times that was at the expense of junior development, coaching certification or a whole series of other programs."

"Now after two or three years, many of the sports not only have good international teams well prepared for '76 but have also started their planning for junior development teams."

A junior men's basketball team competed in a pre-Olympic tournament in Hamilton last week.

Waterpolo is trying to develop a sport school, gymnastics has set up a broad-based community program and there is an excellent age-class swim program.

One large cloud looms over amateur sports in Canada—financing.

Many sport groups are concerned that government and private financing will dry up after the Olympics just when it is needed to build on the work that has already been accomplished in giving Canada international sports prominence.

Jackson said federal support of amateur sports will continue almost at the same level as now. But priority will be given to sports "that are really showing improvement, that really have a commitment to developing domestic programs as well as international programs."

The Loto Canada lottery might bring in $2 million to $6 million.

Sports that have not advanced much in the last three years with federal assistance are going to find it harder in the future, Jackson said.

Sport Canada has already cracked down on the boxing federation and sport officials have said that at least five or six other sports from both summer and winter Olympics are in the agency's bad books.

It's Time To Hurry

It was time to hurry for running-back Steve Beard of Winnipeg Blue Bombers Tuesday night as he headed for goal line with Hamilton defensive-end John Ricca in pursuit. WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Blue Bombers scored two touchdowns in the first quarter and then took advantage of Hamilton penalties to score three more in the second and third quarters, as they rolled to a 38-3 Canadian Football League exhibition victory over the Tiger-Cats Tuesday night.

The Winnipeg touchdowns were scored by Tom Walker, Gord Paterson, Richard Crump, Steve Beard and Harry Knight. Bernie Ruoff converted all five and added a 24-yard field goal in the second quarter. Hamilton's only scoring play was Joe Perri's 42-yard field goal in the second quarter.

The Hamilton offence was ineffective under rookie quarterback Charlie Baggett and Bruce Hill through the entire first half. Only when the game was long decided by Winnipeg's 38-3 lead in the third quarter did the Hamilton offence show signs of promise.

Fox Wins Pitching Duel To Give Royal Oak Lead

Royal Oak moved back into first place in the Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League Tuesday night with a closely fought 1-0 victory over Juan de Fuca Builders.

Ken Fox of Royal Oak bested Larry Cole of Juan de Fuca in the tight pitcher's duel. Each allowed only two hits.

Elwood Thomas score the only run when he led off the fourth inning with a double. He was sacrificed to third by Bob Bugslag and scored on a sacrifice fly by Denis Eckert.

Molsos and Sookie also were engaged in a pitcher's battle in the league's other game and it was Molsos, behind the five-hit pitching of Al Strandland who came out the winner by the same 1-0 score. Glen Bullen was the loser. He allowed Molsos only three hits.

Stan Emerick scored the only run of that contest. He led off the fourth inning with a single and scored on a double by Wally Popoff.

In women's play, GSV Combos defeated Ingham Hotel 10-5 and MacDonald Furniture Juniors won from London Boxing Club 6-2.

At Sanscha Park in Sidney, Seaboard Properties crushed Victoria Chiefs 9-1. Stan Pritchard was the winning pitcher as Seaboard scored all its runs in two innings, five in the second and four in the third.

Hockey Call At Oak Bay

Openings for players are still available in all divisions of the Oak Bay Minor Hockey Association.

Players (ages 11 to 20) new to the association may register for the 1978 season during a session Saturday (9 a.m. to 12 noon) at the Oak Bay Recreation Centre. Last year's players have until Saturday to sign up for another season and ensure places on teams.

When registering, new players must present birth certificates and all must be accompanied by a parent or guardian.

Additional information is available from "Red" Hamilton at 592-1190.

San Francisco (AP) — Randy Jones of San Diego Padres, the winningest pitcher in major-league baseball, heads an eight-man National League staff named Tuesday for the July 13 all-star game against the American League.

The left-handed Jones had a 15-3 record and earned-run average of 2.51 in 165 innings.

The only team to place two pitchers on the staff named by NL manager Sparky An-

Matlack is 10-2 with a 2.62 ERA. Seaver, the 1975 Cy Young Award winner, is 8-5 with a 2.92 ERA.

Others named were unbeaten Rick Rhoden of Los Angeles reliever Ken Forsch of Houston, Andy Messersmith of Atlanta, John Montefusco of San Francisco and Woody

Ontario Golfer Leading

MONTREAL (CP) — Ed Ervasti of London, Ont., shot a three-over-par 75 Tuesday for the first-round lead in the 54-hole Canadian senior golf championship at the Islemere Golf Club.

Ervasti had a two-stroke edge over Jack Wilson of Hudson, Que., and Jack Poyen of Calgary in the competition for golfers 55 years old and more.

Another stroke back at 78 were three Ontario golfers, Merle Noyes of Port Colborne, Jack Nash of London and Pete Hedgewick of Windsor.

Jim Wagstaff of Toronto, the oldest member of the field at 84, fired a 105 and promised he would improve that showing in the second round.

"I'm going to be better tomorrow — and the day after that, too," said Wagstaff.

Seiling, Dunn and Stoughton all became free agents June 1 along with several other Leafs. Scott Garland, George Ferguson and Brian Glennie have all either re-signed or agreed to new packages.

Ballard said he has been attempting to trade Dunn with the team most actively interested — California Golden Seals.

"California offered us cash for him," said Ballard. "I don't need the money. You can't pay cash."

Selling made about $150,000 a year on a three-year contract he began with New York Rangers. Ballard inherited the salary when he claimed Seiling for $30,000 two years ago.

Ballard has offered Seiling between $90,000 and $100,000 on a two-year contract but doubts if the 31-year-old defenceman will accept. "I've heard through the grapevine he won't," said Ballard.

OLYMPIC TRACK OUTLOOK

Only 'a Few Chances for Medals'

By IAN MACLAINE
The Canadian Press

Positive thinking, not of medals but of over-all improvement with an eye to the future, has been the rallying cry for track and field coaches preparing Canada's athletes for the Olympic Games in Montreal.

"Medals at Montreal are not a realistic goal," says Ken Twigg, executive director of the Canadian Track and Field Association. "You just don't jump from nothing into medals."

That sort of thinking has been passed on down the line, through CTFA technical director Lynn Davies, through the national coaching staff to the regional level and the thousands of athletes aspiring to international competition.

And it has been instrumental in lifting Canadian track and field from a defeatist level to a point where they now are coming close to medals at world-class meets such as the Olympics.

But medal performances in Montreal are a tall order from a revamped track program that began just three years ago. Track and field in Canada is not subsidized to the same degree as it is through private industry in the United States and through heavy government funding in the Communist countries of Eastern Europe — the recognized track powers.

The East Germans began a sincere crash program in track in 1966, but it took six years before they started making inroads at the 1972 Munich Games. Twigg and his colleagues are conservatively geared toward peaking at the 1980 Olympics in Moscow.

There are "outside possibilities for winning medals at Montreal, but I won't name them because I don't want to put more pressure on the athletes than there is," Twigg says.

At Munich, only six Canadians qualified for finals and the best showing was a fifth-place finish by Toronto vaulter Bruce Simpson.

It has been apparent from the start of Canada's rejuvenated track program in 1973 that the long-range plan was aimed at the Moscow Games.

But Twigg is confident that more immediate results will be felt at the 1978 Commonwealth Games in Edmonton and the 1979 Pan-American Games in Puerto Rico.

Bill Crothers was the last Canadian male to produce an Olympic medal performance, a second-place silver for 800 metres at Tokyo in 1964. The last Canadian woman to step on the podium were the 4x100 relay team that took the bronze medal at the 1948 London Olympics.

"Montreal," says the CTFA executive director, "will be a reflection of the depth of a total program which, over a reasonable length of time, should come through."

His optimism is reflected by the national coaches, who have been getting a responsive acceptance of their programs over the last year and a half, a contrast from when they first went into the field.

"Three years ago at clinics I had difficulties in finding somebody interested in coaching throwing events," says French-born Jean-Paul Baert. "After two years' work with the top athletes and coaches, we started to have good results on the international scene. This winter, I reached 74 coaches in throws in just four clinics."

Davies, who will not renew his contract with the CTFA when it expires Sept. 30, says the hiring of four national coaches has put track and field on a business level along the lines of European programs and introduction of warm-weather training camps in winter has inspired many young athletes to try for a berth on the national team.

The efforts of such specialists as Baert, sprinting coach Gerard Mach, distance coach Paul Poce and Derek Boosey, the jumping coach, have propelled Canadian athletes over all from 27th in the world two years ago to seventh in 1975.

The results have been showing up almost everywhere in recent months as Canadian athletes get international exposure. Diane Jones in the pentathlon, high-jumper Debbie Brill, Robert Forget, Claude Ferragne and Greg Joy; sprinters Patty Loverock and Marjorie Bailey and 400-metre specialist Joyce Yakubovich have all registered world-class standards in their events this year.

And the women's 4x400 relay team of Yakubovich, Joan Wenzel, Yvonne Saunders also highly regarded at 800 metres and Marg Stride is an outside medal threat at Montreal.

If there are any upsets by Canadians at the Games — and competing at home in front of partisan fans could provide the needed stimulant — they probably will come from the women athletes, who have shown an ability to produce under pressure.

And while the probability of Olympic medals seems remote, Davies is confident of getting people into the finals, and "once you're in there, anything can happen."

"I'm reluctant to make predictions," he adds. "There are people who have medal chances, but there's pressure on them already without me adding any more."

One who isn't reluctant to blow up Canada's chances at the games is team manager

Andy Falconer of Nanaimo, B.C.

"I see the situation a little differently than the coaches," he says. "I'm a lot more optimistic because we're getting more and better competition than ever before."

Another who enthusiastically endorses Canada's chances at the Games is Lionel Pugh, the Vancouver coach of such Olympic hopefuls as Brill, Jones and middle-distance runner Thelma Wright.

He is particularly impressed with Brill, with whom he had a falling out before the Munich Games where she finished eighth. She returned to Pugh last July and placed fourth at the Pan-Am Games in October. After her Commonwealth record jump of 6.90 metres (six feet 2 3/4 inches) at a track meet in California earlier this year, Pugh confidently predicted Brill would be challenging the world record.

"Two months from now she'll be in a position to take a run at Rosie Ackermann's world record 1.96 metres, 6-4 1/2. I feel she can reach 6-6."

Another of Pugh's proteges, Diane Jones, has shown her potential in recent weeks, beating world champion pentathlete Burglinde Pollak of East Germany at an international meet in Austria.

Tickets Go Begging

OTTAWA (CP) — Anyone who wants to combine a visit to the nation's capital and some Olympic soccer action should have no trouble getting game tickets — 85 per cent of them are unsold for five games here.

Four qualification matches and a quarter-final match are being held in Lansdowne Park. "Ticket sales are very bad, in fact disgusting," a Games organizing committee spokesman said Tuesday.

While part of the problem was promotion, Ottawa residents do not appear to find the game as popular as most people in the world, he said.

Iran plays Nigeria on July 18, France meets Mexico on the 19th, the Soviet Union takes on Ghana on the 21st and the Soviets tackle arch-rival North Korea on the 23rd. The quarter-final match is on the 25th.

The seating capacity at Lansdowne is 35,000 but the highest ticket sale so far for a game is 7825.

Quality Keynote Of Soviet Squad

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Bidding to reassert its sporting superiority over the United States, the Soviet Union has proclaimed a new tactic for the Montreal Olympic Games — quality rather than quantity.

This, say Soviet officials, has been the guiding factor in selecting a squad of some 500 athletes to go to Canada.

Most of the Soviet team will be newcomers to Olympic competition but it is to the veterans — some of three, four and five previous Games — the Soviets will be looking for a steady stream of medals.

Among them are 20-mile-metre walker Vladimir Golubnichy, 44, winner of two golds, a silver and a bronze in four Olympic appearances since 1960, and equestrian dressage champions Ivan Kizimov, 49, and Ivan Kalita, 48.

Viktor Saneyev, champion in Mexico City in 1968 and at Munich in 1972, is confident of becoming the first man to win three Olympic gold medals in a row in the triple jump while Nikolai Avilov believes he will repeat his Munich triumph in the decathlon.

In gymnastics, Lyudmila Turischeva and Olga Korbut, together with Nikolai Andriyanov, look set to duplicate their medal-winning performances of four years ago.

Then there is petite 19-year-old Nelli Kim who this year won the Soviet championship. With her sparkling, buoyant style, she could win hearts as Miss Korbut did in Munich.

But for the first time since the Soviet Union emerged from its self-imposed sporting isolation to compete in the 1952 games, it will be scarcely represented in three running events which have brought it a wealth of medals in the past.

Because current performers could not reach the Olympic qualifying mark in the 3,000-metre steeplechase and the 1,500 metres, there will be no Soviet men running these distances.

The selectors also had decided against entering the 5,000 metres. But 21-year-old Enn Sellik, running in the last pre-Olympic trial, turned in the best time in the world this year at 13 minutes, 17.2 seconds — almost nine seconds better than the Olympic mark — and he will be at Montreal.

Meanwhile, the Soviet women track stars will take some beating.

In the national championships in June, Valentina Gerasimova clipped an impressive 1 1/2 seconds off the 800 metre world record.

Three weeks later, Tatyana Kazankina became the world's first woman to cover the 1,500 metres in less than four minutes. Her time was three minutes, 56.0 seconds.

In the women's field events, Faina Melnik, in the discus, and Nadezhda Chizhova, in the shot put, look certain to retain their Olympic titles.

In weightlifting, boxing and wrestling there seems little doubt the men Russians will leave Montreal with a lion's share of the medals again.

Vasily Alexeyev, 34, billed as the strongest man in the world, will be bidding for his second super-heavyweight gold in the weightlifting competition.

Two young stars appear to give some hope of gold medals in Montreal in swimming and diving.

Irina Kalinina, 17-year-old winner of the world title in Colombia last year, won the Soviet 10-metre tower championships this year with 420 points, the best score by any diver in almost a decade.

And Valdimir Raskatov has just broken his own European 400 metres free style swimming record.

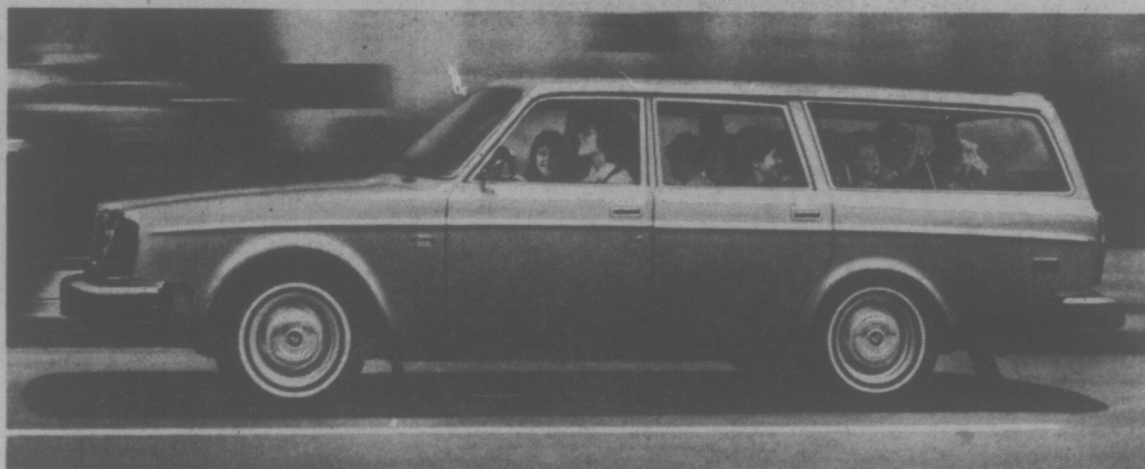

The Soviet Union also is confident of retaining Olympic championships in water polo and men's basketball, and hopes to sweep the women's basketball competition, an Olympics event for the first time.

The Soviet Union, like other Communist countries, will enter its top footballers — Kiev Dynamis — in the Olympics arguing that they are all amateurs since there is officially no professionalism in Soviet sport.

'M' Pair Subdues Babe Ruth Stars

It was M and M night for Greaves Motors in the Senior Amateur Baseball League at Lambrick Park Tuesday.

Rick Mark supplied the batting power and Ray Moretti the pitching finesse. Mark had two doubles and a triple in four trips, scored three runs and batted in one as Greaves defeated the Victoria Firefighter Senior Babe Ruth All-Stars 7-4.

Moretti, for his part, relieved starter Ted Beech in the second inning and allowed only three hits, while striking out eight to get the win. It was his seventh of the season, the league high. He has lost once.

Rob Parris has two for two, a single and a double, batted in three runs and scored one.

Firefighters got their hits from seven different batters. Ross Barnett pitched the route for Firefighters, but suffered from control problems. He walked seven and hit two batters.

Vida Looks Like a Million

By The Associated Press

Vida Blue looked like a million-dollar pitcher Tuesday night but Oakland A's still have Blue and New York Yankees still have their $1.5 million.

Making his second start after three weeks of Charlie Finley-enforced idleness following his voided controversial sale from the A's to the Yankees, Blue hurled the A's to a six-hit 2-0 victory over Baltimore Orioles in an American League game. It was his first victory since June 6 and his 23rd career shutout.

"It was my best game of the season," said Blue, who evened his record at 7-7.

In other American League games, Kansas City Royals split with the Yankees, winning 3-1, then losing 7-4. Texas Rangers edged Detroit Tigers 3-2, Boston Red Sox blanked Chicago White Sox 4-0, Cleveland Indians trimmed California Angels 7-3 and Milwaukee Brewers downed Minnesota Twins 6-2.

Blue had to be good in out-duelling Baltimore ace Jim Palmer, who also allowed six hits. Blue pitched out of several scrapes and Baltimore's last chance came in the ninth.

"I was thinking about getting three outs in the ninth before Reggie Jackson could come to bat," said Blue.

He got the first two, but yielded a single to Bobby Grich.

"Then I knew I had to face Jackson and realized what he could do," Blue said of the Baltimore slugger, his long-time team-mate with the A's.

"It was power versus power. My best against his best."

Blue's best was a 2-2 pitch on which Jackson became his ninth strikeout victim.

Roy White delivered a tie-breaking two-run single and Chris Chambliss added a decisive three-run homer as the Yankees erupted for five runs in the eighth inning of the nightcap.

Joe Lahoud, a .108 hitter, doubled home Toby Harrah with the winning run in the eighth inning while Steve Barr, whose only other victory came way back on April 13 and who had a 6.27 earned-run average, scattered six hits to lead Texas past Detroit.

Ferguson Jenkins pitched a four-hit masterpiece for his 19th career triumph and 39th shutout while Rick Barleson delivered a two-run single in the Boston win. Chicago manager Paul Richards ignored the designated hitter option and Ken Brett became the first pitcher to bat regularly in a meaningful game since the American League adopted the DH rule four years ago.

Brett, an excellent hitting pitcher, went 6-for-3, although he lined to short, grounded sharply to first and lined to first.

Playing manager Frank Robinson slugged his third home run and added a run-scoring single to help his Indians break a four-game losing streak. The 40-year-old Robinson, in one of his infrequent starts, hit his 586th career homer in the first inning and singled home a run in the second.

In the National League, Steve Stone and Bruce Sutter combined for a three-hit shutout as Chicago Cubs beat San Diego Padres 4-0. It was the second consecutive, combined three-hit shutout by the Cub staff against the Padres who were blanked 1-0 Monday by Steve Renko and Joe Coleman.

In other National League games, Cincinnati Reds downed Montreal Expos 10-7, Los Angeles Dodgers beat Philadelphia Phillies 5-1, Atlanta Braves trimmed Pittsburgh Pirates 4-2, St. Louis Cardinals routed San Francisco Giants 13-7 and Houston Astros ripped New York Mets 1-0 in 10 innings.

Grundison, Newman Harvest Swim Medals

Victoria swimmers picked off nine titles during the four-day British Columbia swimming championships held in New Westminster's Canada Games Pool.

New Westminster Hyacks surprised the usually dominant Canadian Dolphins by winning team honors, 1,626 to 1,098 points.

Juan de Fuca Coboes topped Victoria entries among the 22 teams by finishing sixth with 162 points. Victoria Amateur Swim Club was seventh with 153 while Saanich (14 points) and Flying Y (12) finished 18th and 19th, respectively.

Individual standout among Victorians was VASC's Rob Grundison. He won the senior boys' 200 medley and 200 freestyle, scored silver (second) medal performances in the 400 and 100 freestyle and was third in the 400 medley and 100 butterfly.

Judy Newman of Coboes was the outstanding Victoria female performer. She also won two gold medals — in the 100 and 200 breaststroke — and a silver (200 medley).

Both Newman and Grundison had returned to the Pitcher Injured

CHICAGO (AP) — Pitcher Clay Carroll of Chicago White Sox suffered a fracture of his right hand in an accident at home and has been placed on the 21-day disabled list by the American League baseball team.

To replace the veteran reliever, the White Sox have purchased the contract of John (Blue Moon) Odum from their Iowa farm team of the American Association.

West Coast only the day before the provincial meet after attending a Pre-Olympic meet in Montreal. Grundison won a silver medal in the 200 freestyle at Montreal.

Also competing in Montreal were John Ellis, a bronze medalist in the 200 breaststroke, Coboe clubmate Doug Portelance and Janet Rushcall of VASC.

Victoria's other double winner at the B.C. meet was Coboes' Ted Packford, who won the 100 and 200 backstroke. Portelance and VASC's Boyd Grealy and Mark Addison also collected gold medals.

Others to finish in the top three were Flying Y's Alison Noble, getting back to form with a second in the senior girls' 100-metre backstroke; Wayne Bonsdorf of Coboes and VASC's Karen Van Sacker.

UNDER-19 SERIES GETS OFF GROUND

The Inter-Provincial under-19 rugby championships, postponed earlier because of the airline strike, will take place at Winnipeg beginning Friday and continuing through until Sunday.

The B.C. team, coached by Bryan Thorne of the University of Victoria, will play Alberta and Saskatchewan Friday and Manitoba and Ontario Saturday. Five provinces are represented in the competition.

Finals will be held Sunday at 2 p.m. with the consolation final at 12 noon.

Challengers Bow

Jake Peters and Gord Verley of Victoria successfully defended the district's senior golf buttons by defeating challengers Dick Skuce and Fred Day of Royal Colwood on the 17th hole at Glen Meadows this week.

Sun Pampers Long Hitters

SOUTHPORT, England (AP)

— Gene Sarazen relaxed in the clubhouse of the Royal Birkdale Club on the eve of the 105th British Open golf tournament and offered a prediction that "I don't see anything but an American victory."

The semi-retired squire of the world golfing scene, admitting to being 74 but looking 44, was back to play again in the tournament he won in 1932. It's been 53 years since he first played in the British Open. He played in knickers then and he will play in knickers now.

Constant watering has rescued the 7,001-yard, par 72 course from concrete hardness, but a prolonged and continuing heat wave is bound to be an important factor.

Sarazen says: "The course is absolutely adapted for American players." The long hitters will be the favorites, pampered by the sun.

Remarking that tees have been backed up to make the course longer, Sarazen said: "Every time they lengthen the course they cut out another three to four per cent of the players who might have a chance to win." And the added distance is an extra heavy burden for the non-Americans.

Tom Weiskopf, Jack Nicklaus, Hubie Green, were the first names mentioned by Sarazen as the Americans most likely to take advantage of the playing conditions. Jerry Pate, Johnny Miller, Tom Kite and Ray Floyd were in the second group.

In a final practice round Tuesday, Weiskopf shot a 65, and Nicklaus a 67. As a winning team they were 11 under par in a four-ball match against Pate, the U.S. Open champion, and Curtis Strange of Virginia Beach, Va.

Gary Player, winner of the 1974 Open, said: "I am absolutely positive, the tournament record is going to be broken."

That record stands at 276, set first by Arnold Palmer in 1962 and equalled 11 years later by Tom Weiskopf. Both were recorded at Troon.

Neither Weiskopf nor Palmer has so far ventured any predictions about what will happen to their record, although Jack Nicklaus, still the bookies' favorite at 4 to 1 despite an uneventful year thus far, suggested things might not be all that easy.

After a weekend practice round he said the course is playing so hard that low scores may not be the rule, especially for the long hitters who might be in danger of over-hitting the greens.

Pate is the man the gallery will be mainly interested in when the tournament begins. He left Britain last year with the record of losing all four of his Walker Cup matches, then going out in the first round of the British Amateur and failing to qualify for the British Open.

Reagan Tackles Carter

Times News Services
Ronald Reagan took his bid for Republican convention delegates to the national television screens and attacked the probable Democratic candidate Jimmy Carter instead of his own GOP opponent, President Ford.

He said one doesn't fix bad policies by rearranging the bureaucracy or "discipline an irresponsible and wasteful Congress by putting an indulgent friend in the White House."

In Hershey, Pa., some 30 Democratic governors, a few of whom engaged in a last-ditch drive to stop Carter, Tuesday climbed aboard the former Georgia governor's bandwagon and endorsed the man now assured of his party's nomination.

Carter had breakfast with the governors and said he was "very grateful" for the backing. "Many of them did not support me during the primaries, but that is a symbol, I think, of the strength of our party, the diversity of it," he told reporters.

When he reached home from the governors' conference, Carter got spruced up a bit for his big week at the convention which begins Monday in New York's Madison Square Garden. He had his hair cut and his famous teeth cleaned and checked.

Nevada Sen. Paul Laxalt, Reagan's campaign chief, gave a good indication of the tightness of the Republican race by telling reporters some delegations pledged to Ford might abstain on the first ballot so they could legally vote for their preference, Reagan, on subsequent roll calls.

Laxalt said Reagan forces researched the rules "and concluded delegates could probably abstain, so you have a two-person race."

"We will get stronger as we go after the first ballot," said Laxalt.

Meanwhile, Carter announced Tuesday he will meet Thursday at his Plains, Ga., home with Sen. Walter F. Mondale of Minnesota as he continues his quest for a vice presidential running mate.

The prospective Democratic presidential nominee, who began his lengthy face-to-face interviewing of possible ticket mates with Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine of Monday, has said he plans to talk with at least three other prospects but has not identified them.

Mondale, who is highly regarded among Democratic liberals and is generally considered more Liberal than Carter, was an early contender for the presidential nomination but dropped out in November, 1974, saying he "did not have the overwhelming desire to be president which is essential for the kind of campaign that is required."

Mondale, who is 48 and in his 12th year in the Senate, offers Carter an opportunity to choose a well established, influential figure from the party's left-of-center ranks if he chooses to move in that direction.

U.S. Ban On Dye Upheld

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Court of Appeals upheld Tuesday the federal ban on Red No. 2 dye, which until last year was the most widely used artificial coloring for foods, drugs and cosmetics in the U.S.

The three-judge court upheld a U.S. District Court decision last Feb. 6 allowing the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) to ban the coloring.

Dye manufacturers argued that the industry should be allowed to continue using Red No. 2 until safety questions had been resolved. In the absence of proof the dye definitely is harmful to humans, they said, Red No. 2 could not legally be taken off the market until shown to be unsafe.

Justice department lawyer Charles McConahie, representing FDA, said the ban was legal and proper to protect public health because industry had not proven the dye safe.

There was no immediate comment from dye manufacturers.

The controversy over Red No. 2, which has raged off and on for 20 years, heated up again last year when an FDA scientist reported rats fed large amounts of the dye experienced a significant increase in cancerous tumors.

The FDA said the scientist's findings suggested Red No. 2 might be a weak cancer-causing agent.

"But the real reason for banning Red No. 2 was that there was insufficient evidence to definitely prove its safety," an FDA spokesman said. "The law requires positive proof of safety and that was lacking."

George Made a Mistake: Queen

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Queen Elizabeth admits her great-great-great-grandfather, King George III, made a mistake 200 years ago.

The queen, in a speech Tuesday said her ancestor failed to recognize the need for a compromise with the "American colonies" in 1776. "It seems to me that Independence Day, the Fourth of July, should be celebrated as much in Britain as in America," she said in her only speech of the day.

"Not in rejecting at the separation of the American colonies from the British crown, but in sincere gratitude to the founding fathers of this great republic for having taught Britain a very valuable lesson."

She said, "we lost the American colonies because we lacked that statesmanship to know the right time and the manner of yielding what it is impossible to keep."

Philadelphia greeted the Queen and Prince Philip with royal magnificence. On the Delaware River fire floats streaming tons of water from hoses met the royal yacht, Britannia, as it berthed at Penn's landing.

Gov. Milton Shapp, Anne Armstrong, U.S. ambassador to the court of St. James', and mayor Frank Rizzo welcomed the Queen.

A regal guard of mounted first Philadelphia cavalry, formed in 1774 and wearing the silver helmet and tunics of the uniforms of the war of 1812, greeted the Queen as she walked into the Liberty Bell pavilion.

GOT YA...AGAIN! CAN'T TRUST NO-ONE

WASHINGTON (WP) — For the second time in four months, police and FBI agents have rounded up scores of criminals unwittingly selling stolen goods to undercover officers running a fake fencing operation.

The newly revealed police fencing ruse was accomplished by mostly black officers operating for the past seven months from behind an auto parts counter at what was called the H and H Trucking Co.

The fence was located in a one-storey garage-front building in the inner-city neighborhood of Shaw.

At 5 a.m. Tuesday teams of police and FBI agents began serving arrest warrants on 140 suspects identified by the undercover officers as having sold them $1.2 million worth of stolen credit cards, cheques and bonds, stereo sets, television sets, radios, cameras and automobiles.

Half of the suspects charged, in Tuesday's warrants with selling stolen goods at H and H Trucking were previously convicted criminals or criminal defendants free on bail awaiting trial.

Nine of them had been arrested in the first police fence operation here, "Operation Sting," four months ago.

The first stage of the round-up began several weeks ago when the undercover officers sold many of the suspects $10 tickets for a "GYA raffle" for a non-existent Cadillac Eldorado grand prize. GYA, police revealed Tuesday, stood for "Got Ya Again."

Many of the suspects accommodatingly wrote their names and addresses on their raffle tickets, supposedly so they could be contacted if they won.

That enabled police and FBI agents to show up at their homes Tuesday morning to arrest them.

Other suspects were arrested during the rest of the day as they wandered into H and H Trucking in response to other ruses arranged by the undercover officers: a planned fishing trip, offers of counterfeit money and a request to help the undercover officers unload some stolen goods off a truck.

More than 70 suspects had been arrested by the time the operation was revealed at a 2 p.m. press conference, after which the undercover officers returned in a closed van to H and H Trucking, where they awaited and arrested more unaware suspects.

Washington police and prosecutors, the FBI and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms secretly set up H and H Trucking last fall, three months before the other fake fencing operation running simultaneously under their supervision was ended with mass arrests Feb. 28.

That first operation called PFF Inc. and run out of a northeast Washington warehouse, became popularly known as the "Sting" after its existence was made public. The undercover officers operating PFF were all white and impersonated Italian gangsters supposedly working for a Mafia "Don."

The eight black officers operating H and H Trucking impersonated inner-city street criminals who told their customers that they worked for a "Jew."

Ford Sends Team to Alaska To Check Oil Pipe Flaws

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — President Ford has ordered a study of the oil pipeline under construction in Alaska following reports of widespread faulty welding, the White House said Tuesday.

Presidential spokesman Ron Nessen said Ford has called for a report by two of his cabinet officials today and directed that a federal fact-finding team be sent to Alaska.

Although the pipeline is being built by private firms, it is on federally owned lands on which the United States government is responsible for safety and other conditions.

The 800-mile pipeline, from Prudhoe Bay on Alaska's north shore to Valdez on the Gulf of Alaska, is being built by a consortium of seven oil firms known as the Alyeska Pipeline Service Co.

The seven are British Petroleum, Atlantic Richfield, Exxon, Mobil, Union Oil, Phillips Petroleum and Amerasia-Hess.

A recent report by Alyeska said 3,950 questionable welds had been found in the pipeline.

Nessen said Ford had been informed by the auditing firm of Arthur Anderson and Co. there might be more questionable welds than previously assumed.

The pipeline, to tap billions of barrels of oil reserves under the North Slope, is a key factor of the U.S. program to become independent in energy and avoid the effects of any repetition of the 1973 Arab oil embargo.

Congress authorized its construction across federally owned lands in Alaska despite bitter opposition from environmentalists worried about the danger of oil spills and that wildlife and the state's fragile ecology would be destroyed.

Ford asked two cabinet officers, Interior Secretary Thomas Kleppe and Transportation Secretary William Coleman, to submit a written report to him today about welding flaws.

He also directed a fact-finding team, to be headed by Transportation Undersecretary John Barnum, to fly to Alaska early next week to study the situation and make recommendations.

Sympathy Strike Upheld By U.S. Court

WASHINGTON (WP) — Federal courts may not order union members engaging in a sympathy strike to cross another union's picket line, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled Tuesday.

By a 5 to 4 vote the court rejected employer claims that an anti-strike injunction, broadly prohibited by the 1932 Norris-LaGuardia Act, was justified against sympathy strikers whose union had a no-strike clause in its contract with management.

The decision was a narrow and surprising win for organized labor, which has lost most of its supreme court battles in recent years.

Kissinger Demands End to Terrorism

Be Prepared! Army Attacks Scout Camp

DARMSTADT, West Germany (UPI) — The lieutenant second in command of U.S. Army infantrymen who attacked a boy scout bivouac says his outfit mistook the sleeping lads for "aggressors" because the other side in a war games exercise had been playing dirty tricks.

First Lt. Charles Fowler, 25, said Tuesday the opposing special forces had used such tricks as employing agents with long hair and beards and his men thought the scout camp was another play.

Fowler said that in the month-long "Alpine-Friendship" exercise involving units from eight nations, his Company B had been assigned to find and capture or destroy "aggressors," special forces units, "similar to what the U.S. army did in Vietnam."

On the night of May 7, a helicopter pilot reported seeing fires he thought might have been built to guide an "aggressor" helicopter.

In fact, the fires had been built by American boy scout troop 21 of Munich. The scoutmaster, Air Force M. Sgt. Larry Groth, had taken his two dozen boys out for a weekend of camping.

Fowler said five of his men crawled close to the bivouac for a look.

"We saw civilian tents and heard English being spoke," he said.

"We were not exactly sure what they were. At first, we thought they were a camp of gypsies, by the way the tents were set up."

"But then our special forces adviser came up, took a long look and said he was sure this was a guerrilla base camp. We brought in our reserve unit and assaulted the area after we fired a star cluster."

Troop 21 had gone to bed and most members were asleep when the flares exploded, a helicopter swept in low and armed men burst from the woods.

"When we entered the camp and saw all the screaming boys scouts, we knew someone had blundered," Fowler said in an explanatory letter to the military newspaper Stars and Stripes.

"As soon as we got three steps into the area, we called it off, and sat around with egg on our faces," the lieutenant told UPI.

"Of course, we apologized, but I still think it was a thrill for the scouts. They came out and talked to the troops and looked at the weapons."

The incident came to light only after Groth wrote a letter to Stars and Stripes.

CHICAGO (UPI)—U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, saying innocent persons cannot be allowed to become "playthings of international thugs," has called for an international agreement to stem terrorism.

Kissinger declined to criticize Israel for its commando raid on Uganda's Entebbe airport that freed 104 hostages last weekend.

"Clearly the attack on an airport is unprecedented," Kissinger told members of the Chicago Council on Foreign Relations and the mid-America Club Tuesday.

"But equally, the hijacking of airliners, the holding of 100 innocent people for ransom where the host government at a minimum appeared impotent to enforce any accepted international law, indicates that we face a new international problem."

"It is very difficult to establish a general rule on this."

He said the United States has proposed that all countries refuse landing permission to hijacked airliners, automatically arrest hijackers on airliners which do land and give no support to such hijackers.

"For many years we have failed in this effort," Kissinger said.

"We believe it is essential that some international arrangement be made to deal with terrorism because it cannot be tolerated that innocent people become the playthings of international thugs."

The statement drew applause from the luncheon crowd of more than 1,400. Kissinger also said the U.S. policy in southern Africa is to serve as mediator between white and black factions battling for government rule.

"A way must be found to permit African problems to be settled within an African country," Kissinger said. "Because otherwise there will be major international confrontations."

In a speech to the council earlier, Kissinger urged unity in foreign policy and said past foreign policy setbacks were "essentially self-inflicted and caused by our own domestic disunity."

Hays Drew $4,000 Expenses

WASHINGTON (WP) — In a five-day period last September, Rep. Wayne L. Hays (D-Ohio) drew $4,000 worth of Danish kroner from the American embassy in Copenhagen to cover unlisted "delegation expenses" at a North Atlantic assembly meeting, according to state department records.

The 10-man delegation from the House of Representatives and its nine staffers had each already drawn $600 apiece to cover individual expenses, in Copenhagen and another $25,000 had been appropriated earlier by Congress to pay the group's general expenses.

According to Hays' press aide, Carol Clawson, the $4,000 was for dinners and a reception.

Hays is not required to document to the public or even to government auditors what was done with the money, she said.

Clawson cited a law passed 16 years ago which says that the signature of Hays, a chairman of the U.S. North Atlantic assembly delegation, on the embassy receipt for the kroner "shall hereafter be final and conclusive upon the accounting officers in the auditing of accounts."

ARTIFICIAL SMOKES

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP)

Scientists say they have developed an artificially flavored cigarette that is far lower in harmful ingredients than anything now on the market.

Using a technique employed to make chemically flavored foods, researchers said they came up with a cigarette that tastes good but is relatively harmless.

Arthur D. Little Inc., a private research firm, is producing the artificial cigarette flavors under an $183,000 contract with the National Cancer Foundation.

In their study, the researchers said they are adding the flavors to a low-hazard — but low-tasting — cigarette that already has been produced for the U.S. government.

The next step is to combine and recombine the chemicals until they produce something that tastes like unadulterated cigarette smoke, said John Angeline, the project's director.

The chemicals used in the flavoring are all listed by the government as safe to eat, he said. But tests will be required to make sure they also are harmless to inhale.

Work on refining the taste should be finished by next fall, Angeline said.

Sanctions Debate Erupts in U.K.

LONDON (Reuter) — The international trading company Lonrho was at the centre of a debate today about British business ethics after publication of an unfavorable government report on its activities.

Lonrho, which employs nearly 100,000 people, has vast mining and trading interests in the Middle East and Africa.

Within hours of the report's publication Tuesday, Angus Ogilvy, a relative by marriage of the Queen, resigned from business life and allegations were made that major British firms were breaking sanctions against white-ruled Rhodesia.

The investigation described as improper the way Lonrho's funds were used to finance development of a copper mine in Rhodesia after the British colony's unilateral declaration of independence in 1965.

The government has referred the 600-page document to the director of public prosecutions but Attorney-General Sam Silkin said this was routime and no great significance should be attached to it.

The foreign office denied Tuesday night allegations by Lonrho's chief executive, Rowland (Tiny) Rowland, that sanctions against Rhodesia were broken by state-owned British Petroleum and British Leyland. Both companies also deny the charges.

Rowland's allegations were a reaction to suggestions that Lonrho itself evaded sanctions.

The company rejected the report's findings, saying they dealt primarily with historic matters and did not recommend any action.

Ogilvy, husband of Princess Alexandra, a cousin of the Queen, said his resignation from a number of major companies was the only honorable thing to do because he did not have the legal redress to clear his name. He denied the report's conclusion that he had been negligent as a director.

Ogilvy resigned from Lonrho in 1973 but retained directorships in 12 major companies that earned him more than $100,000 a year. He was instrumental in bringing Rowland into the company in 1961 when it was the obscure London and Rhodesian Land and Mine Co.

The inquiry that led to Tuesday's report was ordered by Conservative Prime Minister Edward Heath in 1973 after a furore over an attempt by some board members to oust Rowland as chief executive.

Yellowknife Man To Lead Indians

FORT NORMAN, N.W.T. (CP) — Georges Erasmus, an Indian leader from Yellowknife, N.W.T., was given a mandate Tuesday to lead his people through the crucial land claims negotiations facing the 7,000 status Indians of the Mackenzie district of the Northwest Territories.

Mr. Erasmus, 28, who has Chipewyan and Slavey blood, was elected president of the Indian Brotherhood of the Northwest Territories by a vote of 27 to 8.

Votes were cast by chiefs and councillors of 25 settlements in the Mackenzie River Valley after they rejected a move Monday that would have made the election open to the general membership.

Mr. Erasmus defeated Addie Tobac, 28, of Inuvik, N.W.T., a Hareskin Indian.

His election ended eight months of confusion and fighting between supporters of James Wah-Shee of Yellowknife, removed from office last December at a special general assembly held in Fort Rae, and those who favored a new style of leadership based on greater involvement of communities and chiefs.

Mr. Wah-Shee's supporters included Ms. Tobac, a CBC native program worker and one of five who instituted legal action against the Brotherhood charging the former president's removal from office was unconstitutional.

Mr. Wah-Shee did not contest the election.

Electioneering lasted all day in this community of 275 on the banks of the Mackenzie.

River about 500 miles northwest of Yellowknife. A mood of reconciliation was set by various chiefs anxious to end division in the Brotherhood.

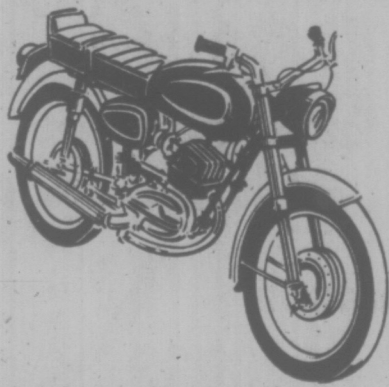

Each band of 500 members or less is entitled to send one chief and one councillor to vote. Bands of more than 500 are allowed an extra vote for each 500 names on the band list.

Mr. Erasmus appealed to the 200 delegates and observers for unity to meet "the powerful forces of the oil companies and the federal government who want to take our land away from us."

He pledged to spend much of his time in office trying to reunite the communities behind a band claim based on their demand for 450,000 square miles of the Mackenzie Valley.

Mr. Erasmus, a member of the Fort Rae band, joined the staff of the Indian Brotherhood eight years ago and held various positions until he resigned two months ago in

$3,700 Grant For Cancer

Two cheques totalling $3,700 were presented recently to the Canadian Cancer Society by the United Commercial Travellers Council local 434.

Since 1974 when the local council was granted a Western Canada Lottery agency, it has donated a total of $9,300 to the cancer society.

In the most recent donation, $1,700 was raised through ticket sales, and $2,000 was a "bonus" from reserve monies in the UCT's western fund resulting from excellent sales over the past year.

Two Esquimalt-based destroyers, HMCS Gatineau and HMCS Kootenay will take part in the Vancouver Sea Festival which begins Friday and ends July 13.

The destroyers will also be the host ships for two Republic of Korea destroyers and one Royal Australian Navy supply ship. The Gatineau and Kootenay will be tied up alongside Ballantine Pier.

All the vessels will be open to the public from 1 to 4 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday.

Rear-Admiral Andrew Col-

Ships at Sea Festival

lieutenant, commander of maritime forces Pacific, will be on hand for official opening ceremonies, to be held at noon on Sunday.

He will join Major Art Phillips on the reviewing stand for the grand parade which begins an hour later.

The Canadian armed forces band will take part in the parade and will also perform public concerts. Also in the parade will be marching units from the Canadian destroyers, as well as HMCS Discovery. Vancouver's reserve naval division.

Boats from the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club will escort the Gatineau and Kootenay into harbor. Gun salutes will be fired by the Vancouver 15th Field Artillery Regiment, Royal Canadian Artillery.

As soon as the ships are docked the Koreans and members of the Vancouver Junior Chamber of Commerce will make flower presentations to the ships' officers and men.

B.C. AIR CADETS OFF TO CAMP

Sixty Royal Canadian Air Cadets from squadrons throughout British Columbia arrived at Cassidy Airport near Nanaimo on Monday for summer camp.

The cadets, both boys and girls, will receive gliding instructions and take part in two-week courses designed to teach air subjects and how to cope with nature.

Le-Col. John Soreff of Vancouver is in charge of the camp. Major George Webber of Edmonton will direct the gliding course and Major J. W. Quarstrom of Nanaimo will be in charge of three air study and bush camp courses.

The gliding course, for cadets between 16 and 18 years of age, will end with a graduation ceremony and banquet in mid-August.

Sponsoring committees and the Air Cadet League of Canada have helped provide the camp with seven gliders and three Cessna L-19 tow aircraft.

"CHILD UNDER A LEAF" is an absorbing experience that had people around me weeping aloud. I've seldom seen such scenes of accomplished intimacy and detail. It's a movie about real people with real problems. Dyan Cannon emerges from it one of the most skilled and courageous actresses in films today.

McKITKA AT IT AGAIN IN CRIME CRACKDOWN

SURREY — First he wanted to bring in the army to deal with juvenile delinquents.

Then he wanted to recruit a roving regiment of citizen-band operators to patrol the municipality in search of vandals.

Now he wants a "mod squad" of specially-trained policemen to roam from municipality to municipality and swoop on trouble spots.

Mayor Ed McKitka's one-man campaign against crime continues unabated.

He suggested this week that police detachments here and in surrounding areas each donate one officer to a special unit whose task would be to concentrate on offences such as breaking and entering.

The idea, he said, "worked marvellous in New York."

McKitka said the crime rate in Surrey is almost getting out of hand and it was time to take decisive steps to "clean this place up."

The mayor was not convinced by statistics showing reported crimes from January to the end of May dropped in Surrey by about 1,600 over the same period last year.

"Maybe people are just fed up with calling," he replied when informed of the decline by Alderman Bill Millar, chairman of the Surrey police-liaison committee.

Millar said the RCMP detachment received more than 50,000 reports last year. He said the five-month reduction was significant in light of the two-per-cent population increase during that period.

But the alderman agreed to raise the mayor's suggestion at the next police-liaison meeting.

Fotheringham On New TV

VANCOUVER — A spokesman for CKVU-TV, a UHF station scheduled to go on the air in the Vancouver area Sept. 5, said today that columnist Allan Fotheringham will be a contributing interviewer to the station's daily news show.

Daryl Duke, president of the station, said that Fotheringham will continue his regular duties as contributing editor of The Sun.

Bang-Up Protest

OSHKOSH, Wis. — Too Hot to Handle and Love Riders, an X-rated double-feature at the Grand Theatre, offended Gerald Frey.

After watching part of the show, Frey, 34, went home and returned with a shotgun, which police said he used to pump three shots into the theatre's screen.

Feather Protester Plucked Following Ticklish Inquiry

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — The Tennessee Valley Authority has run into a ticklish situation over the use of feathers to check for air leaks at its Browns Ferry, Ala., nuclear power plant.

The plant has been closed since March 22, 1975 when a fire, ignited when a candle used to check air leaks destroyed cables from a control room to two of the plants three reactors.

Following the fire, TVA officials said feathers, ultrasonic detectors and soap solutions would be used to check for air leaks in the future.

William Garner, a Scottspeople Japanese Tanker, Swimmer Meet in the River

LAPLACE, La. — A 33-year-old former insurance agent was almost run down by a Japanese tanker, but says he plans to complete his 1,500-mile swim down the Mississippi River. The tanker narrowly missed Wayne Thompson of Portland, Ore., Tuesday. He said he was able to swim out of the tanker's way although the ship's wake sucked him backwards into the middle of the channel.

yer had no comment for reporters Tuesday.

EDMONTON — The man who said he gave the late billionaire Howard Hughes a quarter in 1968 after picking him up in the Nevada desert Tuesday called quits his quest to get a chunk of the fortune left behind by Hughes. A disillusioned James Guitner, 46, said he just wants to "forget the whole thing", adding that his wife has already left him because of the publicity surrounding his claim. "I don't want any more part of Howard Hughes and his damn will ... I just want to get out from under all this, it's too by Israeli troops from Entebbe airport in Uganda last weekend. Rescue at Entebbe will be filmed as a Pan Arts presentation for Universal Pictures, according to an announcement Tuesday. Hill won the best director Oscar for The Sting.

EGYPT BUYS FLORIDA SAND

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A group of Florida scientists have arranged to sell to Egypt more than a ton of sand valued at $2,420. The sand is being sold to a government agency involved in the study of beach erosion, said Dr. Morton Smutz, director of the University of Florida's Coastal and Oceanographic Engineering Laboratory. The sand, which is specially treated, will be spread along coastal areas of Egypt hit by severe wind and wave erosion.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

The newest member of the Greater Victoria regional prosecution staff, who was introduced Tuesday in Victoria provincial court to presiding Judge F. S. Green, has a special connection with the justice system of the area.

Robert Mulligan, 27, introduced by prosecutor Nicholas Lang, was a member of the first group of law students who became summertime Victoria constables in 1970 through a plan originated by Police Chief John Gregory which later became a cross-Canada project.

Mulligan, a native of Winnipeg, was called to the bar in 1973 and has transferred to the staff of regional prosecutor J. W. Anderson after three years on the prosecution staff in the Chilliwack area.

He is the first of Gregory's law student-policemen to join the Greater Victoria prosecution staff. But he is not the first to do similar work in the Victoria court—William Southward, another member of the 1970 group, has conducted drugs prosecutions for the federal justice department.

In the court section of Judge William Ostler, Esquimalt resident Gabor Varga, 20, of 646 Admirals, was found guilty following a trial on a charge of fraud in Esquimalt and was remanded to July 27 for a pre-sentence report and sentence.

Varga was charged with depriving the public of $2,758 between Dec. 1, 1974, and Oct. 31, 1975, by receiving that amount of welfare from the B.C. human resources department while he was receiving unemployment insurance benefits.

Preliminary hearing of a Nanaimo break-in charge against Paul Joseph Desjarlais, 30, was remanded by Green to July 14 for final argument following testimony Monday.

Hearing of a second charge against Desjarlais, resulting from a Victoria break-in, was scheduled for July 23. It had been due for completion Monday but never began.

Two other charges against Desjarlais already had been set for July 23. One charged forcible seizure, break-ins and thefts in a Metchosin incident last winter and the other charged unlawful confinement and prison breach in a Wilkinson Road jail hostage incident in February.

Higher-court trials were ordered after preliminary hearings in two court sections. One concerned a charge against William Bruce Meek, 17, of 810 Rogers, of possession of hashish Feb. 10 in Saanich for the purpose of trafficking and was heard before Ostler. The other, before Judge Harold Alder, involved a charge against Leslie John Mobey, 23, of 101 Island Highway, of criminally negligent driving Feb. 29 in Victoria.

A six-month term of probation and 40 hours of community work were imposed by Ostler for Gregory Scott Dunn, 18, of 2530 Beacon. Dunn pleaded guilty June 17 to a Sidney charge of theft of an inexpensive car stereo and radio from a boat at a marina where he worked.

Saying he was "increasingly viewing acts of violence by citizens as a serious matter," Green ordered a $100 fine and four months' probation for Michael Edward Neeland, 17, of 3016 Hull, who pleaded guilty to a Colwood charge of common assault June 3. Neeland said the reason he grabbed another youth by the throat and pushed him against the wall of the Jacklin Centre was because "the guy swore at me."

Police Chief Named

BUENOS AIRES (Reuter) — Gen. Edmundo Ojeda was named Argentina's new police chief Tuesday, replacing Gen. Arturo Corbetta who resigned following a bomb attack on a federal police building. General Corbetta was appointed police chief on June 24, one week after his predecessor, Gen. Cesario Cordoba, was killed by a bomb planted in his bed.

Journalist Expelled

BOGOTA (Reuter) — A Chilean journalist who sent an erroneous report on the wires of United Press International announcing the assassination of Colombian President Alfonso Lopez Michelsen will be expelled from the country, government sources said Tuesday. UPI officials said Patricia Candia sent the report by mistake while he was practising how to use the teleprinter machines. He was to have joined the news agency this week.

Cut Rate for School Swims Eyed

A proposed $10 an hour rate to allow schools to organize swimming classes at Oak Bay recreation centre will be discussed further before any decision is made, council decided Monday.

The rate represents one-third of the cost calculated on an hourly basis from the cost of construction and compares with $15 an hour paid by Greater Victoria school District for part of the last school term.

The swimming program stopped short in March when the schools depleted their budget for this purpose, aldermen were told.

The previous arrangement was based on an income factor representing the money paid to the school district by the municipality for the use of school facilities.

A similar arrangement exists with other municipalities with recreation facilities, but Oak Bay aldermen rejected the notion that school income would govern a contractual obligation for the rental of municipal facilities.

It was pointed out that in Esquimalt and Saanich the cost of construction was lower than in Oak Bay.

Breakfast: A Matter of Timing

Breakfast... my favorite meal... should be considered the most important meal, since it "breaks our fast" and provides the energy source to get us moving.

The breakfast calorie intake is burned off by our normal activities of work or play in a most satisfying manner and far more efficiently than are the intakes from lunch or dinner. I firmly believe it to be more sensible to eat a hearty breakfast, a little lunch and a modest dinner.

Yet for most people, breakfast is a difficult meal because of timing problems. But I don't — and I don't let the rest of my family — get into this poor eating habit either. A hearty breakfast should include good protein such as milk, eggs, bacon, sausages or fish; good cereal grain in the form of whole wheat bread and/or whole bran cereal; a juice rich in vitamin C; and a hot drink of coffee or tea, or extra milk for youngsters and older people who really need a good intake of calcium.

On work days, I whip up a breakfast in 10 minutes that ranges from 250 to 400 calories for the entire meal. My complete breakfast consists of two slices of grilled bacon with a sliced grilled tomato; four ounces canned, unsweetened orange juice, eight ounces skim milk, one slice of protein bread toast, dab of butter and black tea with lemon and Hermetas saccharin tablet per cup... for a calorie count of 338.

When I hit the kitchen, I put on the kettle for tea, lay the table, turn on the broiler with the door of the oven open, pour out the juice, put the bacon and sliced tomato under the broiler, pour out milk, put bread in the toaster — without pushing it down — and put plates on the lowest shelf of the oven to warm.

When I hear the bacon spit, I turn it and the tomatoes over, pour excess fat into a bowl, make the tea, turn over the bacon and tomato and again pour away fat, push down the bread in the toaster, scream towards the bedrooms that breakfast is ready. By that time they make their way to the breakfast table, it is 10 minutes flat.

Poached eggs can be added to that meal at an added calorie count of 81, or less, if you use Teflon cups in your poacher, within the 10 minute time limit.

My greatest breakfast is kippers, those enchanted smoked herrings we get from Scotland.

I cook kippers in a way that they don't smell up the house for those who have sensitive feelings in the dawn's ugly light.

Don't broil or fry kippers, poach them in a skillet with a covered lid.

This tip came from a fellow reporter who told me how she cooked them with minimal effort, while showering and dressing for work. She made a pot of tea, poured boiling water from the kettle over a pair of kippers, clapped on a lid, left the pot on low heat, pushed down the toaster, showered, dressed and then sat down to an instant breakfast.

I put half an inch of water in the skillet, add a tablespoon vinegar, bring to the lid and when the steam flows, turn it off and let it sit until I'm ready to eat.

Other delights for sensible breakfasts include broiled sausages, with all the fat poured away, razor-thin slices of baby beef liver just sizzled in butter or margarine, poached finnan haddock in skim milk with a dab of butter added, a poached egg on a bed of barely cooked spinach, a hash of yesterday's pasta, left-over cooked beets, boiled potatoes, cabbage and sliced onions.

And when I'm off into that wild outdoors — to fish, ski, skate or hike I'll reverse the order of things and breakfast on homemade soup, steak, salad, home fries and a big hunk of pie, knowing I am enjoying the most important meal of the day, at just the right time.

Forget that black coffee and toast, eat a good breakfast — and an apple for lunch.

Montreal Boom In Food Co-Ops

MONTREAL (CP) — The high cost of food has boosted the popularity of alternatives such as co-operative food dealerships, or co-ops.

Many co-ops have sprung up in the Montreal area in the last six years. Co-ops are able to reduce costs because they purchase food in bulk and have their own members prepare it for market.

Members work at a co-op once a week on average to unpack, clean and prepare goods for sale. They are not paid but their rewards are passed along in cheaper food.

One of the co-op movement's organizers, Steve Gildersleeve, has estimated that about 20 co-ops have sprung up in and around Montreal since 1970.

Gildersleeve's Natural Food Co-op serves as a clearing-house for five of the Montreal co-ops, whose membership totals several thousand. Throughout the province, Natural Food Co-op serves 30 outlets.

"The groups fill out their orders once a month and all at the same time," he said. "That way we can provide food brokers with huge orders and get big discounts."

"We'll buy approximately 100,000 pounds of wheat this year."

Only unprocessed foods — nuts, oils, grains, beans, cheese, some fruit and vegetables — are offered, although some co-ops have begun selling meat and other popular consumer items.

The idea of limiting the role of corporate middle-men to the mutual advantage of consumers and producers was behind a related scheme to revive farmers' markets.

The Creative Cherry.

The Certo season is here.
Time to create your own fresh-tasting jams, jellies and preserves with luscious, just-picked cherries and Certo® fruit pectin.

ANOTHER WAY TO SAY "I LOVE YOU" TO YOUR FAMILY.

Just watch those faces light up when your family tastes the fresh-picked flavour of jams, jellies and preserves you've made yourself.
Nothing tastes so good. Or so special.

SWEET CHERRY JAM MADE WITH CERTO LIQUID.

Makes about 8 medium glasses.
3 cups prepared fruit (about 2 qt fully ripe sweet cherries)
¼ cup lemon juice
5 cups sugar
½ bottle Certo liquid fruit pectin.

First prepare the fruit — Stem and pit about 2 quarts sweet cherries. Chop fine. Measure 3 cups into a large saucepan. Stir in lemon juice.

Then make the jam — Thoroughly mix sugar into fruit. Place over high heat, bring to a full rolling boil, and boil hard 1 minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and at once stir in Certo. Skim off foam with metal spoon. Then stir and skim for 5 minutes to cool slightly to prevent floating fruit. Ladle quickly into sterilized glasses.

Cover at once with ½-inch hot paraffin.

SWEET CHERRY JAM MADE WITH CERTO CRYSTALS.

Prepare fruit as above using a total of 4 cups prepared fruit. Stir in lemon juice. Measure sugar and set aside. Add 1 box Certo crystals to fruit in saucepan. Place over high heat and stir until mixture comes to a boil. Stir in sugar. Bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard 1 minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and continue as above. Makes about 7 medium glasses.

3 CREATIVE ADDITIONS.

Using one of the recipes above, have fun creating your own speciality-of-the-house jams with these variations:

1. Cherry-Almond Jam — Prepare Cherry Jam as directed, adding ½ teaspoon almond extract before ladling jam into glasses. The almond extract gives a stronger cherry flavour.
2. Cherry-Crunch Jam — Prepare Cherry Jam as directed, adding ½ cup chopped almonds, plain or toasted, before ladling jam into glasses.
3. Spiced Cherry Jam — Prepare Cherry Jam as directed, adding ½ teaspoon cinnamon and ½ teaspoon nutmeg to the prepared fruit in saucepan.

USE THE SHORT-BOIL OR FREEZER METHOD.

They both give you fresh-picked fruit flavour. So you choose.
Either way, you'll make luscious jams, jellies and preserves every time.

ENJOY THAT JUST-PICKED FRESH FRUIT FLAVOUR YEAR 'ROUND.

Why stop here? You've just begun! For many, many more recipes that tell you how to turn the fruits (and vegetables) of every season into mouth-watering delicacies, take a peek underneath the label of a bottle or into a box of Certo or write to General Foods Kitchens, P.O. EATING RIGHT about 300 calories and some money.

If calories and dollars are a consideration, buy lean meat. You don't need to pay the extra for fat when what you're eating is good for you. A lean hamburger has about 70 fewer calories than a regular one. A tough cut of steak will save you about 200 or 300 calories over a porterhouse or a sirloin. Once you master the simple art of marinating meat, you can save another two before you cook them, you'll find they probably taste better than the more expensive cuts. They can be just as tender, and save you calories and money. Roll all of this stuff together — you can save a lot of money, your body, and your barbecue — and be healthier for it.

Salad Days For the Olympics

Any time is salad time, but during the months of July and August most Canadians will enjoy top quality salad foods at seasonal prices.

Salad vegetables are at their crisp, tender best now and when combined with protein foods such as meat, poultry, eggs or cheese they make satisfying main dishes. Fresh vegetables play an important role in our diet because they provide essential vitamins, minerals and fibre.

This year, salad month coincides with the staging of the Olympic games in Montreal. Olympic athletes are rated among the healthiest people in the world, so it's hardly surprising that they'll be offered salads at both lunch and dinner, every single day of the Games. There will be more than a dozen types of salads available during that time.

Can you imagine putting in this market order: 20 tons of lettuce, 13 tons of shredded cabbage, 25 tons of tomatoes, 20 tons of cucumbers and a ton of green onions?

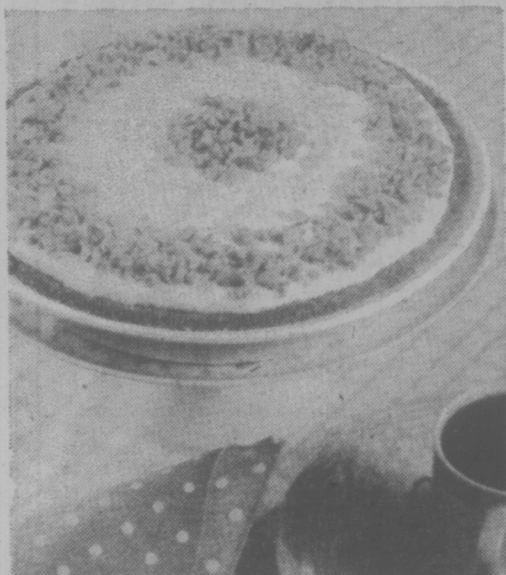

Here is a suggestion from Food Advisory Services, Agriculture Canada, for a medal-winning salad "Chef's Salad."

This main-dish salad is an excellent source of protein and should tempt the appetite of any athlete, whether amateur or professional.

Salute Canada's Salad Month and the Olympic Games and serve a salad daily.

CHEF'S SALAD

2 thick slices (about 7 ounces) cooked chicken, cut in strips
2 thick slices (about 7 ounces) cooked ham, cut in strips
½ cup (2 ounces) Canadian Swiss-style cheese, cut in strips
2 medium tomatoes, cut in wedges
2 sliced hard-cooked eggs
6 cups torn salad greens
½ cucumber, sliced
½ cup sliced green onions
½ cup sliced radishes
½ cup diced green pepper
Dash pepper
¼ cup French dressing
Combine all ingredients except dressing and toss gently. Chill.
Just before serving add dressing. 6 servings.
Note: Contains more than 20 grams protein per serving depending on size of helping.

WINNING combination for any summertime meal is easy and delicious peanut butter ice cream pie.

Peanut Butter Ice Cream Pie

1 Stay Fresh Pack Nabisco Graham Crackers, finely rolled (about 1-2 cups crumbs)
¼ cup butter or margarine, softened
¼ cup granulated sugar
1 quart vanilla ice cream, softened
½ cup chunk-style peanut butter
½ cup heavy cream whipped chopped peanuts Thoroughly blend first three ingredients. Press firmly against bottom and sides of a 9-inch pie plate. (The easy way is to use an 8-inch pie plate.) Bake in a preheated moderate oven (375 degrees F.) 8 minutes. Cool, then chill. Place ice cream in a mixing bowl; fold in peanut butter. Gently fold in whipped cream until evenly blended. Turn into chilled graham cracker crust. Freeze until firm, about 6 hours. Garnish with chopped peanuts. Makes eight (about 3-inch) wedges.

Salesmen Aid Clinic

The Victoria Society of Real Estate Salesmen will present a $500 cheque to the George Pearkes clinic for crippled children at a meeting noon Thursday at The Old Forge.

The funds were raised by the association for charity.

The society won a national real estate award in October for its charity work and for its participation in blood drives.

The meeting is the first of the new season for the salesmen's association. Guest speaker will be Peter Watt, of the University of Victoria department of commerce and business administration, who will discuss new anti-combines legislation as it relates to the real estate industry.

Fibre Overlooked

The average Canadian's usual eating pattern has often been under much criticism. Our high calorie, high-fat diet skimps on some important nutrients, resulting in overweight but poorly fed people. Some believe the problem lies in what we don't eat. One food substance that's been ignored in our diet is fibre.

What is it? We used to describe it simply as "roughage". Now we've refined our nutrition language and refer it to the substances forming the structure (cell walls) of plants and includes materials such as cellulose. Since humans are incapable of breaking it down, it passes unchanged through the intestinal tract to be excreted as a bulky soft residue. An increased fiber intake is beneficial because it moves waste products faster through the system.

To alter your eating pattern to include more fibre, continue to choose foods from the basic five groups of Canada's Food Guide (milk, fruit, vegetables, bread and cereals, meat and fish) but choose whole grain cereals and breads rather than the refined ones. Rely on lots of fruits and vegetables. Dry beans, peas and lentils are also satisfactory.

Whole grain and bran cereals, whole rolled oats, whole wheat breads, baked goods made with whole grain flour and whole ground cornmeal retain the outer coat of the cereal grain (the bran layer) which contains the most fibre. A few teaspoons of bran sprinkled over breakfast cereals, casseroles, yogurt or fruit will add fiber too. A little goes a long way.

When baking, try to incorporate bran in muffins, pancakes, breads and cookies. This gives a pleasant nutty flavor and texture. Add bran to meat loaves, breeding for chicken or fish and macaroni and cheese. Nuts, dried fruits and sesame seeds are also useful.

Give your family
our best.

Some of you will remember and have adopted as a standby my recipe for Cufondly. It is a macaroni dish that calls for small amounts of several green vegetables, grated cheese and eggs. It was created by some genius cook in Toronto and has become famous in several restaurants in Canada.

Noodles Romanoff may be a spinoff of Cufondly. I do not know. It is simpler and because it calls for cheese could very well be the main course of a meatless meal. The vegetarians in our audience should clip this now for it is ideal to serve with an abundance of green and yellow vegetables alongside.

NOODLES ROMANOFF

(serves 4 or 5)
3 cups broad dry egg noodles (well packed) — about half a 12-oz. pkg.)

Giving the Cold Shoulder To Uninvited Picnic Guests

Summer invites outdoor meals such as picnics and barbecues. However, bacteria flourish in hot weather, when food and moisture are available, making food poisoning an all-too-common uninvited guest.

Bacteria like some of the same kinds of food people like, especially non-acid foods such as milk, eggs, meat, poultry and fish, and will grow rapidly in these. Dry foods such as sugar and dry rice are not favorable to bacterial growth. The temperature in which bacterial growth is rapid is called the danger zone. It ranges from 40 deg. F

(4 deg. C) to 140 deg. F (60 deg. C).

Follow these simple suggestions to ensure no uninvited guests, no matter how microscopic, at your next outdoor meal.

— Keep all perishable foods — hard-cooked eggs, dairy products, salad dressings, meat, fish, poultry — below 40 deg. F (4 deg. C) or above 140 deg. F (60 deg. C). This applies especially to vacuum-packed meat and ready-to-eat barbecued meats and poultry.

— You can freeze meat patties and most sandwiches before placing them in an insulated bag or packing in ice.

They'll thaw slowly and be ready in time for the picnic.

— Take special care of salads containing protein foods. Keep the greens and vegetables in covered containers. Pack cheese, meat and hard-cooked eggs in the cooler. Pickled eggs are more convenient because they do not require refrigeration. Use an oil and vinegar dressing rather than mayonnaise and add just before serving.

— Prechill or preheat insulated containers before filling with cold or hot food or beverage to ensure that it will stay that way until needed.

Once you're at the picnic site, place the food in a shady spot to avoid excess heat. Remove the food from their containers and cooler only when appetites are ready.

By LYNN AND JOEL RAPP

Dear Lynn and Joel: Could you please give me a few tips on what plants would grow well in a bathroom? My bathroom has a small window that faces north, but it doesn't give much light so the room is usually quite dim. Thank you.

—D.F.

Dear D.F.:

Unfortunately, it would be nice if you had a nice, bright bathroom, then we could suggest certain plants like Hanging Ferns or Crotons or Zebra Plants — that really thrive on the extra humidity provided by a bathroom. But, alas, these plants won't make it in a dimly lit situation.

If you want to put up a hanging plant, we'd suggest you stick to either a Philodendron or Pothos. As for plants to set about, the Palms, Chinese Evergreens, Sansevierias and Dracaenas seem to do best in the low-light situations.

Granny Turns Them Green With Envy

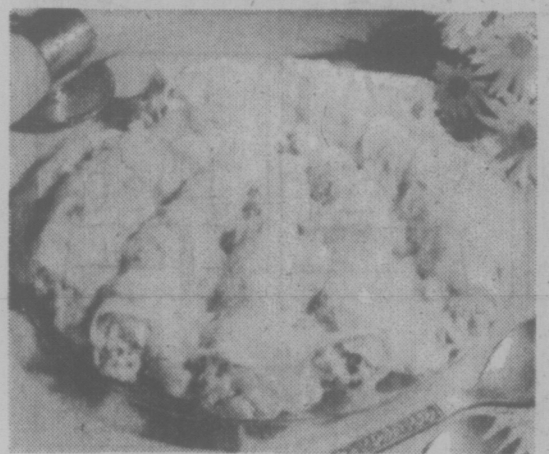

Yes, Virginia, there is a Granny Smith. The original Granny Smith apple tree arose in the house garden of an old lady, Mrs. T. Smith, in Ryde, near Sydney, Australia, and it fruited for the first time in 1862.

Nobody knew how it got there, as it was a totally unique apple probably propagated by an accident of nature. However, Mrs. Smith sold apples from the tree at a local stand and they became known as "Granny Smith's cooking apple."

Seeds were later taken to New Zealand and planted in the coastal lowlands which have proven to be an ideal home for Granny Smith apples.

The number of trees has more than quadrupled between 1953 and 1976 and is now the leading variety exported from New Zealand.

The beautiful green hills of New Zealand are a perfect backdrop for the Granny Smith apple orchards. But the rains which keep New Zealand constantly green were a little too enthusiastic during the summer of 1975, the time when the apples were growing in size and needed more sun.

Stuffed Crepes With Crab Sauce

- CREPES
- 1/2 cup milk
 - 1 egg
 - 1/2 cup sifted flour
 - 1/4 teaspoon salt
- FILLING
- 1 can (14-oz.) Brunswick Chicken Haddies
 - 1/2 cup thinly sliced celery
 - 2 tablespoons thinly sliced green onions
 - 1/2 cup salad dressing
 - 2 tablespoons diced pimiento
 - 1 teaspoon curry powder
 - 1 teaspoon lemon juice
 - 1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
- SAUCE
- 1 can (10-oz.) condensed shrimp soup
 - 1/2 cup milk
 - 1 (6-oz.) can Brunswick or Firelight crabmeat
 - 1 teaspoon lemon juice
- To Make Crepes: Combine milk, eggs, flour, and salt. Beat until smooth. Fry crepes one at a time, in a lightly greased 6 or 7-inch skillet, using 3 tablespoonsful of batter for each crepe. Pour batter into skillet; tilt pan quickly so that batter will cover bottom of pan. Cook until lightly browned on both sides, turning once. Stack and keep warm while preparing filling.
- To Make Filling: Flake

chicken haddies; combine with onion, salad dressing, pimiento, curry powder, lemon juice, and Worcestershire sauce; mix carefully. Spread an equal amount of filling over each crepe, and roll up jelly roll style. Arrange filled crepes on heatproof platter. Cover with aluminum foil, crimping foil to edges of platter. Bake in a moderate oven, 350 deg. F., about 15 minutes or until well heated. Prepare sauce while crepes are heating.

To Make Sauce: Combine soup, milk, crab, and lemon juice. Warm to serving temperature over low heat, stirring constantly.

To Serve: Uncover platter and pour sauce over crepes. Makes 6 crepes or 6 servings.

Pantry Shelf Dessert

Consequently, the 1975-76 crop had a little smaller size than usual, but an even finer quality which more than made up for the size difference.

Allen Scott, a New Zealand apple grower, offers some interesting technical facts about apples. He says that an apple has from 70 to not more than 80 million cells per apple. By the fifth or sixth week after petal fall they reach their maximum number of cells and from then on their growth is by cell expansion. Inasmuch as the cells hold the juice and flavor, it stands to reason that if the apple gets too large, the cell walls become weak and the flavor and juice is not as concentrated. So, as Mr. Scott so aptly says, "Since all apples have approximately the same number of cells and each cell has the same share of flavor and goodness, then it naturally follows, that bite for bite, there's more flavor in smaller apples."

He continued, "Granny Smith apples have great energy. They travel without tiring, handling them is no hassle, they're green as Callaway grass and crisp and crunchy as cold celery. Their juice is acid, leaving a clean after-taste."

It isn't often you are lucky enough to have a grower who is also so articulate as to be almost poetic about his commodity.

The fact that New Zealand's seasons are opposite ours is responsible for us having this really tree-fresh apple in our summertime. There are few foods that are as refreshing in the heat of the summer as a really crisp, juicy, fresh apple.

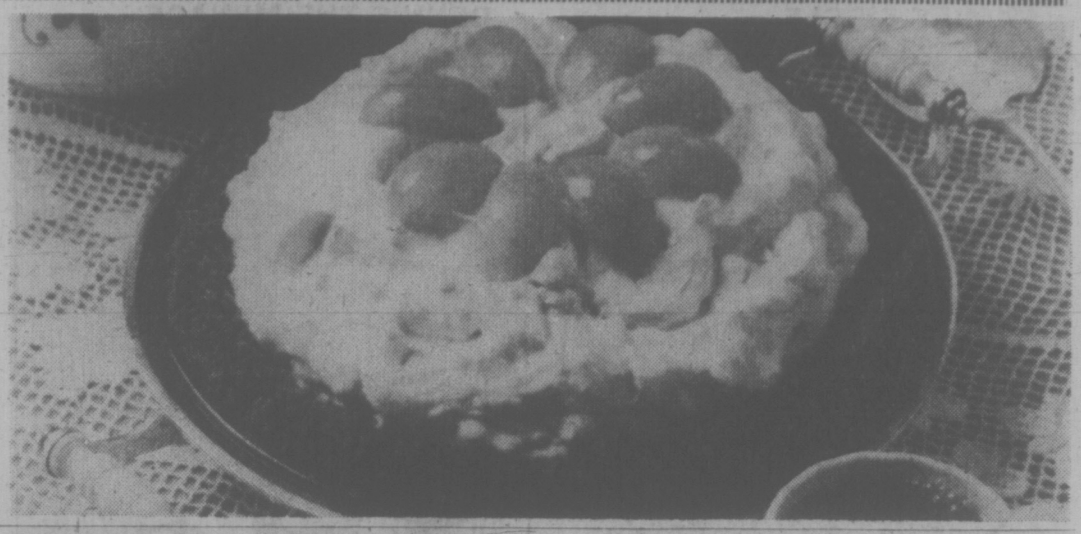

One of the plusses for smaller size apples (they're not really tiny, just a little smaller than the usual crop) is that you get more apples per pound. And an extra plus for New Zealand Granny Smith's is that because of their juiciness and flavor, children and adults as well will eat the whole apple, which in these days of high prices is pretty important.

New Zealand first exported Granny Smith's into North America about 50 years ago. The acceptance has grown so much over the years that they have now become a staple summer item to which the consumers look forward. And the best news... New Zealand growers are continuing to plant more acreage so we can look forward to receiving more Granny Smith's each year.

Apricot fluff pie is the perfect light, cool, dessert to serve after a heavy meal. It's "pretty-as-a-picture" appearance, creamy filling and crunchy crust make it a recipe to be used again and again for many special occasions.

- APRICOT FLUFF PIE
- 1-3 cup butter or margarine
 - 1/4 cup sugar
 - 2 tablespoons unsweetened cocoa powder
 - 4 cups corn flakes, finely crushed
 - 1 package (3 ounces) orange jelly dessert
 - 1 cup canned apricot halves, drained reserving
 - 1 cup syrup (17 oz. can)
 - 2 cups whipping cream or dairy topping
1. Measure butter, sugar and cocoa powder into small saucepan. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, just until entire mixture boils. Remove from heat. Add corn flakes crumbs. Mix well. With back of spoon press crumbs mixture evenly and firmly around sides and in bottom of 9-inch pie pan to form crust. Chill.
 2. Place jelly dessert in small mixing bowl. Measure 1 cup reserved apricot syrup into small saucepan. Heat until boiling. Add hot syrup to jelly, stirring until dissolved. Chill until jelly is consistency of unbeaten egg whites.
 3. Meanwhile, reserve 4 apricot halves for garnish. Cut remaining apricot halves into small pieces. Set aside.
 4. Place whipping cream in large mixing bowl. Beat until stiff peaks form. Refrigerate.
 5. Whip chilled jelly until foamy and double in volume. Gently fold gelatin and apricot pieces into whipped cream. Spoon filling into crust. Refrigerate about 1 hour or until set. Cut each reserved apricot half into 2 pieces. Arrange on chilled pie, as desired. Serves 8.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

By any standard, West's double of South's final contract was a terrible call. But it turned out nicely, for it guided the East defender to the winning line of play. The hand came up in a team-of-four match.

 ♥ K95
 ♦ Q76
 ♣ K1072

WEST ♠ A942
 ♥ 7632
 ♦ 10
 ♣ 643

 ♥ QJ84
 ♦ J853
 ♣ AJ9

 ♥ A10
 ♦ AK942
 ♣ Q85

The bidding:
 South West North East
 1NT Pass 2NT Pass
 3NT Dbl. Pass Pass Pass

Opening lead: Four of ♣.

In explanation of West's double (not in justification), he knew that his partner had eight or so points: West had just six; North had eight or nine; and South had 17-18. And South rated to have the spade King. It was West's hope that East would be able to obtain the lead before South could come to nine tricks. A spade return by East would (hopefully) enable West to cash four spade tricks.

Declarer played the hand well. He captured East's ten of spades with his jack, entered dummy via the heart king, and led a low club towards his queen. East now went into a long huddle. He finally concluded that West's double could be based only on a good spade suit. So he put up his club ace and led back a spade. West now proceeded to cash four spade tricks.

When the deal was re-played, the second West defender did not double South's three notrump contract. In fact, he didn't even dream of doubling. But he also opened his fourth highest spade, with the trick being won by South's jack.

Declarer next made the same good play that his counterpart had made. He entered dummy via the heart king, after which he led back the deuce of clubs. East, quite normally, played low (aces are born to capture kings and queens, not lowly deuces), and South captured the trick with his queen. South was now en route to victory.

Next came the diamond king, felling West's ten. This was followed by a diamond to dummy's queen. West discarding a club. The board's remaining diamond came next, with a successfully finessed South's nine-spot being taken against East's jack. Declarer now had his nine tricks: one spade, two hearts, five diamonds, and one club.

LITTLE PEOPLE'S PUZZLE

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Thursday, July 8
 By SYDNEY OMARE

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Gather information — analyze it and communicate your findings. Emphasis on publications, educational material, long-range views and plans. Expand outlook — you're going to be inspired to "go places!"

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A wish "comes true" in most unusual manner. Partner or mate gets involved and financial structure is in picture, too. Aquarius, Leo and Scorpio figure prominently. One you are drawn to returns the compliment. You undergo a most satisfactory experience!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Accent on unique agreements, contacts. You advance cause by making known your views. Refuse to be intimidated by one who claims to "call the law." Listen, observe and learn. You are on the way to establishing valuable contacts.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Home, parents, work, security seem to combine into a montage. Read the signs, clues. Become familiar with basic material. Do your homework. Get together with persons who share your aspirations. Taurus, Libra could figure prominently.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Take a chance on your own abilities. Sweeping changes may be on tap. Know it and be ready for action. Member of opposite sex is very much in picture. Be wary of money promises. No one intends to give you something for nothing.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Agreements are finalized. Property could be involved. Get valid appraisal. Refuse to sell yourself short. Older individual will lend benefit of experience. Be receptive, firm and take on added responsibility. Capricorn, Cancer persons could figure prominently.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Check instructions, reports, directions. Avoid wild-goose chase. Relative may be sincere — but misinformed. Know it and act accordingly. Get rid of burden not rightly your own. One who should understand doesn't want to understand. You'll perceive and you'll do something about it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Emphasis on collection, evaluation, protection of possessions. You are able to get to heart of matters, to express, to comprehend costs, values and to obtain fresh viewpoint which could be profitable. Leo, Aquarius persons figure in picture.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Lunar cycle is high — take initiative. Lead rather than follow. Set pace and create policy. Obtain hint from Scorpio message. Accent on individuality, personality, appearance, original methods and approach.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Much that happens is quiet, subdued, obscured, hidden. Hospital, organization, special charity could be involved. You may feel restricted. You'll have to separate fact from illusion. You may be asked to speak before cameras.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Accent on romantic involvement, costs of making desires become realities. You get facts — you become aware of routine, of what's written between the lines. Taurus, Leo and Scorpio figure prominently. You feel more vital, alive and ambitious.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You make fine impression on one in position of authority. Your style comes through — more persons become aware of your unique abilities. Some changes due — and a message or calls sets tone of your day. Relative is involved, too.

IF JULY 8th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are creative, productive, capable of organizing a business. You accept responsibility. You are dynamic, passionate and dedicated. Capricorn, Cancer persons play important roles in your life. A new start indicated in August. In October, burden is lifted — you will have more opportunities and a "better" social life.

Judges Protest Unanimity

By DAN POTTIER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The three judges heading the inquiry into bilingualism in Quebec airspace have announced that they do not feel bound to file a unanimous report to Parliament on the issue.

The provision for a unanimous report is contained in the agreement the government signed last week with Canadian pilots and air traffic controllers to end a nine-day work stoppage on the issue of bilingual air traffic control in Quebec.

In a letter to Transport Minister Otto Lang tabled in the Commons Tuesday, the three say that clause of the controversial agreement "does not bind the commission."

"The commissioners are free to give their opinions as they see fit by a majority or unanimously," they add.

They quote a section of the Interpretation Act which says that "where an act or thing is required or authorized to be done by more than two persons, a majority of them may do it."

The judges say the letter is designed to "determine precisely" the commission of inquiry's interpretation of the implications of the agreement with the pilots and controllers and to dispel any ambiguity.

The agreement has been criticized by francophone pilots and controllers, Quebec Liberals and some members of the Commons opposition.

Jean Marchand resigned

last week from the cabinet over the issue and Quebec Superior Court Chief Justice Jules Deschamps has asked for a review of the agreement by the Canadian Council of Judges.

The call for a unanimous report fell in a clause of the agreement saying it was to be "a prerequisite to the expansion or introduction of any bilingual air traffic service."

The judges comment on five of the more contentious clauses of the agreement and generally conclude that they present few difficulties to the inquiry commission.

A much-criticized part of the agreement is that which calls for a free vote in Parliament on the commission's final report.

"What the government does with a report after it has been delivered does not concern the commissioners, and it is not their function to comment upon this provision," the judges say.

RCMP Deny Letter Leak

OTTAWA (CP) — The RCMP Tuesday angrily denied that they leaked a letter in which federal NDP leader Ed Broadbent raised questions about former cabinet minister Jean Marchand's possible involvement in a dredging contract scandal which is before the courts.

Broadbent asked Prime Minister Trudeau, in a private letter a week ago, to answer the questions. Otherwise, Broadbent said, he would raise them publicly Monday.

Broadbent said Monday he was satisfied with Trudeau's response.

Existence of the Broadbent letter became public last Thursday hours after Marchand resigned from the cabinet. There were suggestions then, all denied, that the Broadbent letter led to the resignation.

An RCMP spokesman said the force didn't see the letter until last Friday at 3:55 p.m., when an emissary from Mr. Trudeau's office handed a copy to RCMP Commissioner Maurice Nadeau.

This was, the spokesman said, obviously some time after the news media became aware of the existence and contents of the letter.

The spokesman was replying to broadcast allegations that the RCMP had leaked the letter.

CABINET WAR DANCE BEFORE SESSION

OTTAWA (CP) — Some members of Prime Minister Trudeau's government got in a little high-stepping Tuesday before entering the Commons for the daily question period.

Trudeau, some cabinet ministers and some Liberal MPs gathered in the rotunda of the Parliament Buildings to watch a group of Haida Indians perform traditional dances.

Before the dancing was over, Indian Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan, Defence Minister James Richardson and Veterans Affairs Minister Dan MacDonald, who has an artificial leg, were shuffling.

bobbing and weaving to the rhythm of Haida chants and drum beats.

Gus MacFarlane (L-Hamilton Mountain), who has been known to sing opera in the Commons, and Iona Campagnolo (L — Skeena) also joined in.

Trudeau stole away to an appointment before he could be dragged into the performance.

The dancers, from the Queen Charlotte Islands of British Columbia, staged the display before leaving for West Germany where they will participate in Indian festival.

WORKERS IN B.C. THE HIGHEST PAID

OTTAWA (CP) — Average weekly earnings for about one-half the labor force rose in April by 0.6 per cent to $222.94, Statistics Canada reported Tuesday.

Highest average earnings were in the construction industry at $320.51 a week.

Regionally, British Columbia had the highest average earnings at $252.42 a week, while the Atlantic provinces had the lowest at $198.89.

Dumping Charged

OTTAWA (FP) — The federal department of national revenue has determined that gymnasium equipment produced by Nissen Corp. of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, is being dumped into Canada and that the margin of dumping and the volumes involved are significant enough to warrant referral of the matter to the Anti-Dumping Tribunal.

The tribunal has scheduled a public hearing on the matter for Aug. 4 in Ottawa.

Until the Tribunal announces its decision on the extent of damage, if any, to the domestic gymnasium equipment industry as a result of the dumping, the government has imposed a provisional duty equal to the margin of dumping, retroactive to June 16.

FREDERICTON (CP) — Federal and provincial agents are conducting the most intensive search ever for the commercial poachers of Atlantic salmon — and some residents complain law enforcement officers are not averse to kicking in a door and invading premises with a search warrant.

One Campbellton man complained recently that agents of fisheries and wildlife services used "gestapo-type tactics" in invading two area homes.

A spokesman for the provincial nature resources department, which laid charges after the incident, declined comment, except to say that warrants are not needed to search commercial establishments.

More than 250 stores and restaurants were checked in surprise raids throughout the province a few days after the Campbellton incident. An estimated 3,000 pounds of the fish were seized.

Government officials promise more raids as they crack down on a problem that Natural Resources Minister Roland Boudreau says is reaching "very serious" proportions.

Boudreau estimates that about 11 million pounds of salmon are poached annually in New Brunswick waters.

Part of the problem, he says, is that the federal government will not allow commercial salmon fishing in New Brunswick.

Instead of the ban instituted in 1971, Boudreau said, the federal government should impose fines as high as $10,000 for the use of dragnets — boats 45 to 85 feet long — to gather any type of fish within 25 miles of the province's shoreline; and inshore fishermen should be allowed licenses to fish salmon.

"When there's no market for poachers they just don't poach," he said.

He said his department can only use patrols and raids, even though he doesn't like them, until the federal fisheries department changes its regulations.

Guns, Ammo Found In Prison

OTTAWA (CP) — The office of Solicitor-General Warren Allmand Tuesday confirmed that knives, guns and ammunition have been discovered in New Brunswick's Dorchester Penitentiary in the past few months.

But the aide to the minister said there was nothing to tie the discovery of the weapons to a possible escape attempt by convicted police killers Rich and Ambrose and James Hutchison.

Confirmation of the arms find came after Paul Dick (PC — Lunenburg-Carleton) asked in the Commons if the guards had found an ammunition cache including seven sticks of dynamite and if the discovery related to a possible escape attempt by the convicts.

The aide to Allmand said penitentiary authorities discovered some rounds of ammunition and a homemade gun and homemade knives in the prison in April. In June, a 32-calibre rifle and 15 rounds of ammunition were found.

But no dynamite was found. The aide said there was nothing positive to link the attempt to Ambrose and Hutchison.

Airport Contrast Study

LONDON (Reuters) — London's two main airports face contrasting problems: one has too much traffic, the other not enough.

While passengers using Heathrow Airport at peak periods meet frustrating delays because of overcrowding, the capital's second major airport at Gatwick is handling only a fraction of its potential.

In an attempt to divert passengers from Heathrow, the world's busiest airport, in terms of international traffic, the government now has been asked to consider imposing passenger charges of up to $24 a head.

Gatwick, some 25 miles south of London, has undergone a $124-million modernization, but it is under-used. Airlines are reluctant to move from Heathrow, which is nearer to central London, mainly because of its greater network of connecting flights.

The idea of passenger charges comes in a document, Airport Strategy for Great Britain, issued by the trade department for discussion among civic authorities, airlines, amenity organizations, and others affected by airport developments.

The aim is to reduce congestion at Heathrow and to build up Gatwick and provincial airports with supporting and short-haul international scheduled services, charter flights and domestic traffic. Passenger charges would make the less fashionable airports more popular in certain areas.

But demand for air transport facilities remains heavily concentrated in London and southeast England and, with no expansion planned for Heathrow, the pressure is on to get Gatwick more widely used. Both airports are owned by the state-run British Airports Authorities (BAA).

The planned completion date of Gatwick's development is 1978. The airport will then be able to handle about 16 million passengers a year compared with Heathrow's present 21 million.

Yet the airlines show no signs of wanting to move to the BAA's gleaming new airport.

A Trans World Airlines spokesman said: "We will not transfer to Gatwick because we have tremendous investment at Heathrow. We will resist any move to try to put pressure on us to do so."

Some officials see Gatwick in danger of becoming an embarrassing white elephant.

Gatwick, which already has a new international arrivals section, vast new parking garages and improved road and rail links, currently handles just over five million passengers a year. Yet airport officials say Gatwick could handle twice as many now.

When the new departures section, scheduled for completion next year, is finished, further pier and apron developments will bring the airport's potential up to the target figure of 16 million.

Buffalo Fit The Bill...

MITCHELL, S.D. (AP) — Ralph Mahoney advises livestock farmers who are troubled by high operating costs and low prices to raise buffalo.

"For one thing, buffalo are a lot more profitable," he said.

Not only does buffalo meat bring about double the price of regular beef, but buffalo take much less feed.

"We can feed three buffalo for about what it takes to feed one regular cow," he said, adding that buffalo gain weight at about the same rate as regular cattle.

"Buffalo is identical to beef in cooking," Mahoney's wife noted. "It doesn't have the wild taste some people expect it to have, but it is a little coarser."

Mahoney said the unpredictable nature of the buffalo is his greatest concern.

"After a while you get too used to working with them, and you let your guard down," he said. "But buffalo are not animals to be trusted."

Mahoney works full-time with the South Dakota Air National Guard and farms the family's 1,400 acres.

He recalled that 13 years ago he read an article about a man who raised buffalo. "I made up my mind right then to buy some," he said.

His first purchase was five buffalo. The herd now totals 150 head.

Most of the buffalo meat he sells goes to organizations that hold special buffalo barbecues, or to restaurants in the area that feature the meat on their menus.

GARDENING

Waterlilies on the Patio...

The smallest pool, tub, or permanently set container of water outdoors will give pleasure to viewers if it has some connection with plant growth.

On a small patio, a balcony, or a sundeck it need not contain plants but it should be so situated that it will at times reflect plants or be glimpsed between plants.

At ground level most gardeners think of waterlilies in a pool. It is indeed possible to grow and flower a waterlily plant in a two-foot wide tub, 10 or 12 inches deep. Any pool larger than this will grow not only waterlilies but other waterplants.

While we think of water in the garden as a cooling agent in summer, we must remember that to have abundant bloom on lily plants the water must receive many hours of sunlight.

You may have noticed where waterlilies occur in nature thriving in freshwater lakes, they will have around eight or 10 hours sunlight during July and August.

In the garden, we may choose a sunny spot for a pool initially and have great success with flowers on a lily plant. It may spread to cover the water. Then flowering decreases and finally stops. This can be due not solely because of crowding for we have seen waterlily plants so thick that it seemed you could walk in them to gather the blooms. But with time, shrubs and trees in a garden also grow in width, height and density.

So it is that sunshine is cut off from the pool surface and the waterlilies fail to bloom.

With a really tiny pool, the remedy is to re-situate in an open spot. A metal tub or a simple concrete lined shallow pool will suffice.

Make a transfer of a chunk of waterlily to the new site. Late April is the best time for carrying out pieces of plant, just as renewed root growth commences. The job is not easy, for even a foot wide mat of roots in wet soil is heavy to manipulate.

If you are taking off a piece, look for growth crowns, being sure that plenty of undamaged (undisturbed) roots are imbedded in that tight pack of wet mud. And don't leave it out of water for many minutes. Stems and new leaf growth accustomed to constant contact with water do not like chilly spring winds. The old pool can either be discarded, or used for growing a plant of water-loving iris. The blue iris versicolor loves constant moisture and flowers in tree shade.

Partially fill the old pool with leafsoil and compost, then plant the iris roots and keep it soggy all spring and summer, letting it dry before winter.

A pool of any size, large or small, is an invitation to birds and animals to drink. Cats particularly love to drink from a garden pool where plants are growing. This places a responsibility on the gardener to be sure that spray and fertilizer residues do not collect in the water either by drift or by seepage. A pool can be a delight to all. Keep it that way, a place of refreshment for humans and animal life.

Burned Man Dies in Hospital

A 74-year-old Nanaimo man died Monday two-and-a-half months after being injured in a fire at a Victoria hospital.

Ernest Kelly was a patient at Royal Jubilee Hospital's Memorial Pavilion when he accidentally set fire to his clothing last April 25.

He was transferred to the burn unit at Victoria General Hospital and was undergoing treatment when he died.

His was the second fire death in Victoria this week.

On Tuesday night Donald Fry, 77, died from burns he received in a fire at his apartment at 250 Douglas the previous evening.

Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre said he has ordered post-mortems on both men and is expected to decide later today or Thursday whether he will hold an inquiry or an inquest in either case.

Victoria police said Fry felt ill Monday, took two sleeping pills and went to bed.

His wife and a friend were in the living room when about 10:30 p.m. they smelled smoke and, opening the bedroom door, saw Fry engulfed in flames.

Fry was rushed to Victoria General Hospital in poor condition.

Victoria Fire Chief Eric Simmons said the probable cause of the fires was careless use of smoking materials.

Saanich fire chief Harold Gain said Kelly had apparently lit a match which fell onto his lap setting fire to his clothing. The fire was extinguished by an orderly. Gain said a book of matches was found on the floor near the bed.

St. Jorre said Kelly was transferred to the Burn Unit with third degree burns to 10 to 15 per cent of his body.

The coroner noted Kelly was a terminal cancer patient in the hospital at the time and has asked for a pathologist report to ascertain whether the man's death could be attributed to the disease or to the fire injuries.

Orion Proposal Verdict Thursday

OTTAWA (CP) — The cabinet will decide Thursday on a recommendation from one of its own committees that a new Lockheed proposal to provide 18 Orion patrol planes to the military be accepted, government officials say.

The officials say the proposal was accepted by the cabinet's defence and external affairs committee last week.

The proposal would replace the one that died in May because the company could not raise the necessary financing in Canadian banks to carry the first three years of a five-year project.

Lockheed officials have said the financing problem is solved and that, by modifying its proposal and providing for deliveries one year later than first proposed, it can raise the necessary money from its 24 American banker creditors.

The company, which failed to borrow up to $375 million to finance the last proposal, says under its new proposal it needs only $50 million at any one time and that for only six-month intervals.

Lockheed has said that its new proposal involves delaying installation of some electronic equipment until later in the project, not putting in some equipment at all and allowing defence to buy it at some later time.

The overall cost would be about $1 billion.

The industrial benefits to Canadian industry as a result of a Lockheed contract would be more than $500 million.

The replacement of the old Argus now doing Canadian long-range patrol work would commence a year later than originally planned—in 1980-81.

Defence Minister James Richardson has said the cabinet is aware that Lockheed has its financial difficulties solved.

He has said the government would consider the new Lockheed proposal before any other. The Boeing Corp., which lost out to Lockheed last year in a competition run by the government, has submitted a proposal based on the 707.

Oil: Curse or Blessing for Ecuador

QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — The steady throb of oil pumps working in the jungles is pushing this Andean country ahead, even while some critics are saying that oil is more a curse than a blessing. "That's private industry out there," says a western diplomat from embassy offices overlooking Quito's modernizing city centre, tucked at the base of 15,700-foot Mount Pichincha.

"Those cars out there are privately owned. Ecuador is building dams, a refinery, roads. They're doing this. They're doing that. This country is developing."

A host of Ecuadorian and foreign businessmen, bankers and even some government officials and a growing middle class are beginning to agree, despite continuing strikes and sporadic violence.

Oil is taking Ecuador rapidly away from the days when bananas and cacao were kings.

The diplomat added: "It takes money. The government planned its budget on 210,000 barrels a day, not the 160,000 barrels now being produced. It made a mistake. Ecuador has had to tighten its belt."

"People still say they could install computers and make it all work—like in the United States. That's the point. We're not in the States."

An Ecuadorian banker said: "We're learning to live with the new money. With oil, perspectives here are entirely different. Exports are close to a billion dollars. That's four times what we exported before."

Ecuador has about 1.3 billion barrels of proven reserves in its eastern, Amazon-basin jungles. At the present rate of pumping it will export oil only until 1993 unless new reserves are found.

The country consumes 42,000 barrels of oil a day, increasing at the rate of 10 per cent yearly, and in 1975 pumped 52 million barrels through the 317-mile pipeline built by the U.S. consortium of Texaco-Gulf.

Since the pipeline began operating in August, 1972, revenue to Ecuador has risen above $1.1 billion.

For many, oil brought immediate prosperity. For many others, including about four million ill-educated and rural Indians, the prospect of new riches has been a largely unfulfilled dream.

"So many Indians came to the city that agricultural production actually went down," said sharecropper Jose Zela, who sells chickens during the day and doubles as a doorman in a hotel at night.

"Prices went up and people couldn't afford to eat." He added: "I'm selling chickens for double what I got a year ago."

Almost overnight, the doorman was able to buy a car.

In Quito, government statistics showed that consumer prices at a base of 100 rose 25 points until 1972 when TexacoGulf began pumping from Lago Agrio fields, 110 miles east of Quito. Since then the rate of increase has tripled.

The government budget, for example, went from the equivalent of $200 million in 1970 to almost $700 million in 1976, reflecting not only increased investments but higher costs for getting things done.

Sugar, rice, bread and other consumer staples went up an average of 60 per cent in four years. When sugar increased from the equivalent of 7 cents to 10 cents a pound in January, labor unions went to the streets. The government fell but the price of sugar was unchanged.

Yet most bankers and oilmen say annual per-capita income has at least doubled to $500 and that inflation slowed from a record 22 per cent in 1974 to 12-18 per cent last year, and is still falling.

Quito relied heavily upon tourism for development capital before 1972.

Travellers to Ecuador have tripled since then and hotel men say that most of the "tourists" are actually businessmen bringing in money and technology. Now ringed by several modern highways, Quito has more new cars than ever, and two television stations broadcast to 20,000 receivers throughout the country.

Four national airlines operate 10¹/₂ daily round-trip flights to the Pacific port of Guayaquil. There, importation houses sell everything from video tape equipment to $30,000 (after taxes) limousines.

The general petroleum law set in motion by Ecuador's military government in 1974 estimated all oil revenues for 22 items on the national planning budget.

Some say most of the money goes toward meeting a large deficit, but many projects of importance are moving ahead.

A $320-million hydroelectric development will make southern Cuenca a new pole of industry at the entrance to the eastern jungle's main access to the Andes.

A Japanese company is finishing a $120-million refinery at Esmeraldas. Ecuador will be the first country on the west coast of South America to export gasoline.

American engineers are optimistic that trillions of cubic feet of natural gas will soon be exploited from the estuary of the Quayas River on the coast, where Northwest Energy Corp. plans to build a $150-million plant for converting gas to fertilizers—a major requirement for this country to feed its 6.5 million people.

But many critics of the two military governments that have ruled here since February, 1972, say they have done nothing about social betterment.

Ragged Indians still carry heavy loads through Quito's hilly streets and sleep on doorsteps. The critics contend they should be getting something from oil.

"If the junta turns back power to civilian government in February, 1978, as promised, all hell may break loose," says one politician, "and Ecuador might be worse off than if it had no oil at all."

Minor labor violence has broken out again. There also is the growing call for nationalization of Texaco-Gulf, which operates the oil consortium with the state company CEPE.

Ecuador now gets $10.57 in taxes and royalties per barrel of oil, which is beginning to be exported on long-term contracts at $11.45 a barrel.

"It's just not profitable to explore under present arrangements," one oilman said. "Companies have to have profits. If nationalization is threatened, they'll soon pull out."

Industry, commerce and agriculture leaders recently asked for regulation of the industry, "not a surrender to foreign capital or a falling into exaggerated nationalism."

Asylum Seekers To Get Protection

MONTREAL (CP) —

Foreign athletes seeking political asylum during the Olympic Games will be directed to protective custody by hostesses they approach, the Olympic organizing committee's director of hostesses and guides says.

Phil Plouffe said that "we've told our hostesses and guides to take anyone seeking asylum into private rooms inside the Olympic complex right away and to ask the closest security guard for help."

He said the security agent and hostess would remain with the athlete until police arrived.

"The hostesses are hired because of their linguistic capabilities, and naturally they'll be in a position to translate requests for asylum from athletes and other visiting delegates," he said.

"Normal Canadian law" will apply to those who request asylum and "the athlete will be treated like a sailor or anyone else who seeks asylum. There will be no preference."

Mr. Plouffe said 119 persons asked for asylum at the Munich Games in 1972 and there may be a similar number during the Olympics here.

Leningrad: Isolated, Elegant

LENINGRAD (AP) — "For a person from the West, this is probably one of the most isolated postings in the world," a diplomat said of Leningrad, the elegant city that Peter the Great built two centuries ago in hopes of bringing Russia closer to the Western world.

There are fewer than 250 Westerners, all of them students or diplomats, now living among the 4.5 million people of the Soviet Union's second-largest city. Most of them have arrived since 1973, when the Soviet Union decided to let several Western countries including the United States, join the infant diplomatic community here on the Gulf of Finland.

The Westerners' special grocery stores get mixed in and there's rarely a new face in the community. The closest Western doctors are about 100 miles northwest in Finland or 400 miles to the southeast in Moscow.

But despite the isolation and the natural problems of a community where everybody knows everybody, the Western colony in Leningrad is flourishing. Some enthusiasts claim, in fact, that Leningrad and not Moscow is the best place to learn about Russian life.

"It's easier to get to know Russians here than in Moscow," declared one Western diplomat.

You'll meet intellectuals, for instance, at an official meeting or cultural exhibit. You'll exchange cards and in a few weeks they invite you over. This would be rare in Moscow.

Furthermore, several diplomats said, there is more free time for Westerners to meet people. While a diplomat in Moscow may have to attend seven official receptions a week, his Leningrad counterpart may have only a few official obligations a month.

Western students in Leningrad usually live in dormitories with Russian students.

For additional friends, all they need to do is walk down Nevsky Prospekt, Leningrad's main street. While Muscovites have grown indifferent to the large number of foreigners wandering their city, a Russian speaking Westerner strolling through Leningrad quickly attracts Russians. He is bombarded with questions about the West.

Soviet authorities, at least in some ways, seem to be facilitating the contacts. While diplomats in Moscow are assigned places in special foreign compounds guarded by police, envoys here can live in ordinary apartment buildings.

Apartment-house friendships occasionally develop, particularly when a Western child starts playing with the children of a Russian family.

Leningrad now has consulates of the United States, France, West Germany, Sweden, Finland, Iran, Japan and five European Communist countries. The Finns, who opened their consulate in 1967, were the first Western country to set up shop here after the Second World War. The East and West bloc diplomatic communities, including dependents, total about 150 people. Most foreign students are here for less than a year.

The small diplomatic community in Leningrad means apartment space, theatre tickets and other services are immediately available from Soviet government bodies. In Moscow, there is a long waiting list for diplomatic apartments and authorities are hard-pressed to come up with other services demanded by the several thousand foreign residents.

On the other hand, Westerners in Leningrad have no equivalent of the bright diplomatic grocery store for foreigners in Moscow. They have to telephone a food delivery service that has been known to see little difference between cheap soup meat and a requested filet steak.

By some accounts, the foreign community in Leningrad has acquired less of a garrison mentality than its equivalent in Moscow.

One diplomat noted that when violent incidents against Russians living in New York were followed recently by threatening telephone calls and bomb scares to employees of the U.S. Embassy in Moscow, workers at the Leningrad consulate were not disturbed.

The relaxed atmosphere also may be helping détente between East bloc and West bloc diplomats in Leningrad. The Easterners and Westerners often visit each other's homes and get into long conversations.

Air Festival Slated Sunday

QUALICUM BEACH — The Qualicum air festival, organized by the Parksville Qualicum Aero Club, will be held at the Qualicum Airport Saturday and Sunday.

It is expected to attract some 150 planes from many points in B.C., Alberta and the northwest U.S. There will be competitions for pilots and navigators.

Highlight of the weekend will be Sunday afternoon's air show which will feature Comox Tracker aircraft, Mars water bomber from Sprat Lake near Port Alberni, and parachutists from Comox Skydiving Club. Bob Gilmour and Sven Kjon will give aerobatic displays while Vancouver's Bluebirds will be flying in formation.

Buses to Be Checked

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A spokesman for General Motors of Canada Ltd. said Tuesday that 714 GM bus units across Canada are being checked for a possible defect in the steering mechanism.

Gordon Soutter, public relations director for GM's diesel division, made the statement in a telephone interview after the Ottawa-Carleton bus system, OC Transpo, took 69 buses off the road for tests because of possible steering linkage defects.

GM issued a warning last week about the possible defects, which the company said may cause the wheels to lock during operation.

In Vancouver today Jim Wright, maintenance manager for B.C. Hydro's transit division on the Lower Mainland, said there are a maximum of 40 buses involved and he has just received their serial numbers.

Wright said they are among a current order of 105 buses, only 61 of which have arrived in B.C. and he didn't believe any of them were in service. Seven of the 61 have been shipped to Victoria.

As soon as the buses have been located they will be checked for the possible defect, he said.

Soutter said registered letters have been sent to operators of the 714 suspected units advising them that checks of the mechanism should be made. No accidents resulting from the defects have been reported.

A spokesman for OC Transpo said Tuesday the defect was found in only one of 50 buses checked.

Soutter said buses with possible defects also are located in the following Ontario centres:

Kitchener, Toronto, Sault Ste. Marie, North Bay, Guelph, Brampton, Mississauga, St. Thomas, Timmins, Orillia, Sarnia, Burlington, Kingston, Cambridge, Stratford, Welland, Kenora and Thunder Bay.

In the west, centres affected are Vancouver, Prince George, B.C., Edmonton, St. Albert, Alta., Lethbridge, Alta., Regina, Saskatoon and Moose Jaw, Sask.

CLIMBING GEAR AID IN CATHEDRAL HEIST

COLOGNE (AP) — Three Yugoslavs have admitted stealing treasures from Cologne cathedral last year with the help of mountain climbing gear, police said.

Police and officials of the Cologne state attorney's office said 40 per cent of the cathedral's gem-encrusted relics have been recovered.

The relics, stolen Nov. 2, are insured for $800,000 but are considered priceless.

Spokesmen said Branislav Tunjic, 23, and Vilim Dalavale, 27, were arrested in Zurich, June 17. Ljubomir Ernst, 43, was apprehended in Milan last Saturday and his wife Johanna, 36, is under investigative detention in Belgrade, authorities said.

In One Short Decade, a Savior Has Become Discredited

WASHINGTON POST

KINSHASA — One summer morning a European resident of Kinshasa awoke to find his Zairean cook jumping up and down with joy. "The president is through — there's been a coup d'état," the servant exclaimed. "Finally we will have enough to eat."

The servant proved wrong. The shots he heard and took for a revolution in fact were fired by troops searching for common criminals who had escaped from a Kinshasa prison.

But his reaction within the privacy of his employer's house — and the average citizen's indifference in public — typified a mood.

More than 10 years after he seized power — much to the relief of his fellow-citizens, who were sickened by the former Belgian Congo's first years of almost-constant civil war — President Mobutu Sese Seko is an increasingly lonely and discredited figure.

His strongest card is his lingering reputation as the man who ended the chaos of those early years of independence.

A common attitude is that summed up by a disenchanted, if resigned, taxi driver who said: "We might as well keep him because the next man almost certainly won't be any better."

That, too, seems a view shared by the Ford Administration anxious to shore up an old ally who has recently returned to the fold after disastrous radical economic measures apparently inspired by official trips to North Korea and China.

Mobutu's falling popularity is a function of the normal attrition of power coupled with a major political and military setback — his disastrous intervention in Angola — and the economic mess born of neglect, falling copper prices and wasteful prestige expenditures.

In a speech in May, Mobutu went a long way toward confessing to the country's gradual but unmistakable decline since independence in 1960.

"Let's make an effort to get away from the mentality that we used to have during the colonial period," he exhorted his fellow-citizens.

"We are an independent people. Forget about the golden days that you used to have during the Belgian presence here."

Zaireans cannot be blamed for indulging in nostalgic selective memory.

Once the most prosperous colony in black Africa, the country has now gone back to subsistence economy in many regions.

Mobutu completed the effect of natural neglect by forcing out the Greek, Portuguese and Pakistani traders who kept the bush marketing and distribution system functioning.

Farmers no longer can get their produce to market over washed-out roads and are no longer able to buy the textiles, kerosene, and other staples.

Farmers have either stopped planting for want of incentives or taken to smuggling their produce abroad. Coffee, tea, gold and diamonds are among Zaire's riches that now show up as exports for neighboring countries.

The telephone service in Kinshasa has become so precarious that the government's inner circle communicates with each other by walkie-talkie, the ultimate status symbol.

Private firms, shortwave radios have replaced the telephone, telegram and telex as the only sure communication systems in a country as large as the United States east of the Mississippi.

Mobutu has taken to blaming others for his troubles. The civil service has undoubtedly undergone a steady erosion. "In what other country in the world have you seen the whole population in business," he complained. "Some work for the government and still run a shop and don't pay taxes."

"Everybody is saying prices have gone up. What is Mobutu doing? The roads are in bad shape. What's Mobutu doing? Not enough buses in town? Don't look at Mobutu because Mobutu is working 24 hours a day," he said.

So difficult has it become for average Zaireans to make ends meet — inflation is running well over 30 per cent annually and Mobutu himself admits that 90 per cent of imported goods never get outside the capital — that they are no longer satisfied with confessions, catalogues of shortcomings and exhortations promising instant change.

"Everyone wants to buy a Mercedes overnight," he lamented.

"If you want to steal, steal a little in a nice way," he instructed his listeners.

"But if you steal too much to become rich overnight you'll soon be caught."

Mobutu

DEMOCRACY ... IN A QUIET WAY

By ROBIN WRIGHT

Washington Post

GABORONE, Botswana — There is a country in southern Africa that is directly dependent upon South Africa, yet where blacks, whites, "coloreds" (people of mixed race) and Asians share tables in cafes, sit next to each other in movies and swim in the same public pools.

There are no separate stairways, no segregated hotels or restaurants, and no divided toilet and transportation facilities for the different races, as there are in South Africa.

The only reason most people have heard of Botswana is because Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton remarried here, and, in fact, the former British protectorate, larger than France, may be the most unheralded country on the continent, considering that it was recently judged the most democratic state in Africa by New York's Freedom House.

Freedom House is a private organization that describes its purpose as the "strengthening of free societies."

Geographically, Botswana is bordered almost entirely by the so-called "white" countries—South Africa, Rhodesia and Namibia. Politically, Botswana has struggled, like all African countries in the post-independence period, to create stability through a "strong" government. Fewer than half a dozen of the continent's 46 states have more than a single dominating political party — but Botswana is one of them.

President Sir Seretse Khama and his Democratic party faced not just one, but three opposition parties in the 1974 elections. All were provided time on the national radio and space in the country's main newspaper.

Economically, Botswana is tied completely to South Africa and Rhodesia. A landlocked nation, it imports and exports mainly through South Africa. South African businesses are the primary investors and developers of Botswana's vast mineral resources. And almost half the employed population works as laborers in south African mines.

The new national development plan admits: "In many respects, the economy remains a satellite of South Africa." Even the currency is the South African rand.

Yet the ties have not prevented President Khama from speaking out strongly against apartheid and white-minority governments. The charismatic chief of state has been one of the main backers of the guerrilla campaign against Rhodesia, along with the president of Mozambique, Tanzania and Zambia.

"There is clearly no future for white-minority governments in Africa," Khama said recently.

About South Africa, the country with which Botswana has the closest economic ties, he said: "We cannot consider having diplomatic relations with Pretoria. This is totally out of the question. The combination of principle and pragmatism has paid large dividends during the first decade of independence, granted in October, 1966.

Economic potential in minerals, beef and diamonds, the main exports, has brought in foreign investment for development projects.

Use Your Hands Premier Urges

Washington Post

SINGAPORE — Prosperity has come so softly to this little city-state that Singaporeans no longer are willing to do hard, dirty jobs, no matter how well they pay.

The "rugged society" that Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew envisaged when he came to power a decade ago has evolved into a comfort-seeking society in which young people only want to dress up each day to go to air-conditioned offices, Lee complained recently.

In an attempt to re-educate Singaporeans into realizing that there is dignity in manual labor, not to mention good salaries, Lee opened a "use your hands" campaign on the island last month.

"Attitudes to jobs are formed partly in the schools," Lee said.

"As important is the influence of parents, family and neighbors. We have decided to start with the schools."

The next day, Lee and his cabinet ministers went to a number of schools and showed students and teachers that not even the high and the mighty were above using their hands. Lee himself swung a wet, soapy mop around a school floor.

"This campaign to get students, teachers and principals to use their hands is a start to reverse the process of the last eight years, during which we went through a rapid change in social attitudes and life styles," the prime minister said.

Lee took to task teachers, particularly women, for influencing youngsters in their disdain for blue-collar jobs.

"Higher income, resulting from economic growth, led to better clothes and shoes, motorcycles and cars," he said. "Because they had clean and nice clothes, they sought clean and nice jobs. Students were reinforced in these attitudes by a younger generation of teachers."

Noting that 90 per cent of Singapore's teachers were young women, Lee said, "They are better dressed and spend more time and money on their clothes and appearance than their predecessors did."

There are hard economic factors as well as sociological reasons behind Lee's appeal to teachers and students. The disinclination of young Singaporeans to do manual labor has forced the government to import thousands of workers from neighboring Indonesia and Malaysia. They send much of their earnings back home.

In the construction field alone — a boom area in Singapore's economy — more than 60 per cent of wood workers and 46 per cent of metal workers are non-Singaporeans.

In an effort to right this imbalance, the "use your hands" campaign has begun to entrust students, from grammar school on up, with cleaning and repairing tasks around their schools.

For the younger ones, it may be just a matter of closing the classroom windows at the end of the day," said Tan Teng Wai, secretary of the campaign's steering committee. "The idea is to include a healthy attitude toward manual labor."

Older children do such jobs as painting classrooms and repairing schoolyard fences. Public reaction, according to Tan, has been "pretty good." "Of course," he noted, "some mothers have written letters saying they were worried that their children would get hurt. But no one's been hurt yet."

Sex Kitten Will Protect Other Species

By PAUL MAJENDIE
PARIS (Reuters) — Beauty has come to the aid of the beast. Brigitte Bardot has set up her own international foundation for the protection of wild life.

At the age of 41, the former sex kitten, still sends men's pulses racing with her famous pout. But now she is putting her charms to work publicizing a worldwide campaign to save animals from exploitation and extinction.

It is a highly ambitious crusade with a publicity program to match.

The foundation's plans for the next two years are to attack four main abuses of animals: the mass slaughter of young seals, vivisection, abandoning pets on vacation and fur coat sales.

To get its point across, the B.B. Foundation will have regular shows on radio and television, sponsor literary prizes, organize a film festival and publish a magazine with a projected circulation of 200,000.

No. 1 target is the annual slaughter of young seals, clubbed to death by Norwegian, Danish and Canadian hunters.

Miss Bardot said, "I hope to meet Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau this year and get him to put a stop to the slaughter."

She led a spirited demonstration outside the Norwegian Embassy here as her fellow protesters chanted, "Arrest the seal killers!"

Vivisection is another target. She promised, "I will fight in this field also. Trying out beauty products on animals, this sort of thing, is frightful."

The foundation estimated, in a dossier distributed to the press that about 400 million animals are "sacrificed on the altar of vivisection" every year around the world.

It attacked Danish pork-breeding methods, Thai crocodile farms and American battery hen houses, saying, "The time will come when a chicken reproduces itself already stuffed and roasted."

Miss Bardot admits to having erred in the past over fur coats. "It's true, I used to wear them once, but that's all finished now. I'll never wear them again."

So this autumn her foundation plans a major campaign to convince women of the evils of wearing coats skinned from the backs of slaughtered animals. The major fall fur coat fashion shows will be a prime target.

Last summer Miss Bardot went on television to beg the French not to neglect their pets on holiday. About 300,000 are abandoned each year, so for 1976 she has decided, "my foundation is to create near Paris a refuge where people going on holiday can leave their pets for a modest sum."

The foundation, which plans to establish contacts in Canada, the United States, Britain and West Germany, defined its main aims as protecting animals, arousing public opinion and saving threatened species.

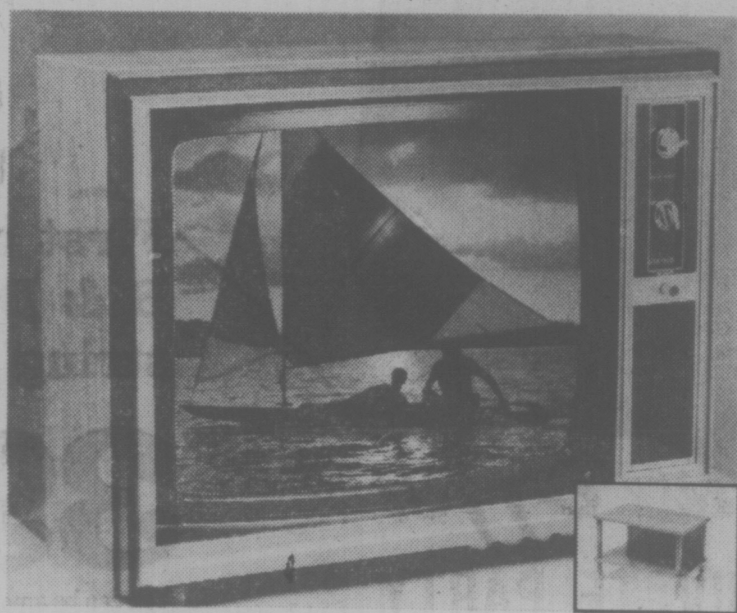

Among the threatened species it cited the last 11 Tasmanian wolves, 35 Greenland whales, 45 Javanese rhinoceroses and the migrating storks of Strasbourg that are eagerly hunted in Africa. The foundation said about 20,000 elephants are slaughtered every year in Uganda and Kenya to satisfy the Asian appetite for ivory.

"They are threatened with extinction within 30 years."

Drinking Drivers Face $2,000 Fine

Fines as high as $2,000 will be requested for impaired drivers appearing in Victoria provincial court resulting from amendments to the Criminal Code.

Changes in federal legislation have boosted the maximum fine for impaired drivers from the current $500 to $2,000 and Victoria regional crown counsel Wally Anderson said today he's certain prosecutors will seek higher penalties under new rules.

"I think raising the maximum reflects the legislature's interest that the situation be toughened up and although it hasn't yet been specifically discussed here, I'm sure our people will be asking for higher fines."

The Criminal Code amendments were proclaimed April 26 to deal with a problem that in B.C. has become so widespread it ranks second only to speeding.

Last year there were 17,768 convictions, warnings and 24-hour suspensions totalling 308 in Victoria and 6,000 on the Lower Mainland.

This year before May Victoria police charged 153 drivers with impaired and having a breath-alcohol content of .08, compared to 117 during the first five months of 1975.

The new fine maximum was landed today by Superintendent of Motor Vehicles R. G. Whitlock, but he said effectiveness will "depend on how far the court is willing to go to make full use of higher fines."

"If they do use them it will undoubtedly benefit," he said, adding however that courts rarely made full use of the old $500 maximum.

Average fine for first time offenders in Victoria Provincial court is $350 to $400, below the $500 maximum, said Anderson.

Since the changes, he said prosecutors in at least one case have already asked that a $1,000 fine be levied, but whether or not they are imposed depends on the judge, the case, and the motorist's individual situation.

Anderson said it will "take a while for things to change." Whitlock pointed out that in addition to changes in fines amendments to the B.C. Motor Vehicle Act have been approved and are awaiting proclamation.

Amendments increase the first offender's licence suspension time from one month to three months and from three months to six months for a second offender, or if death, injury or property damage is involved.

The federal changes do not increase jail terms for drinking and driving offences, but they substantially increase the probability offenders may be jailed.

A first offence still carries the possibility of a maximum six-month jail sentence in addition to the $2,000 fine. And a jail sentence ranging from 14 days to one year is still mandatory for a second offence.

For a third offence the range is three months to two years. Whitlock said the stiffer penalties will definitely have a "deterrent effect, besides there is a better chance of being caught because enforcement of laws has been stepped-up."

Yet police estimate that for every drinking driver caught, 20 escape detection.

CONSERVATION PAYS AT BANK

SEATTLE (AP) — A bank here has begun offering loans at interest rates well below the norm to persons who take steps to conserve energy through home remodeling or use of vehicles that use little fuel.

J. C. Baillargeon, chairman, Seattle Trust and Savings Bank, said the loans will reward energy conservation by coming with interest rates one-half to three-quarters per cent lower than norm loans.

Home purchase loans will be offered at 8.5 per cent, a half-per-cent lower than normal, for homes which score at least 15 points on a set of energy conservation standards set by the bank.

For example, six inches of ceiling insulation would score five points, wall insulation five points and floor insulation five points.

Lower-interest auto loans will be made for cars that get at least 25 miles to a gallon of gasoline, and lower rates are provided for boat purchases involving certain hull and engine combinations that conserve fuel.

Conference Ends In Stalemate

By PETER THOMSON
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Federal and provincial finance ministers made virtually no progress Tuesday in seeking a new formula for financing of shared cost programs such as medicare, hospital insurance and post-secondary education.

The conference ended after Tuesday's sessions instead of continuing today as planned. "It didn't end in anger," one official stated, "but because there was no more common ground to be found."

There will likely be two more federal-provincial conferences before any agreement on a precise formula to replace current dollar-matching arrangements is reached, probably by November, federal finance minister Donald Macdonald said.

The conference was a follow-up to one last month when Prime Minister Trudeau proposed a new arrangement whereby Ottawa would help finance shared cost programs through a combination of cash grants and tax points transferred to the provinces.

Only the principle was discussed at the time. Federal proposals, in the form of three options, were made public only Tuesday. Provincial ministers reacted.

The crowd about 300 were seated with the rest standing in the aisle and in every open doorway, represented a cross section of Oak Bay society.

There were professional men who left work early; retired gentry; a shapely lady in shorts fresh off her sun-deck; others dressed to the nines; couples with noisy youngsters; a woman knitting socks and two rows behind her a mother nursing an infant.

All had one thing on their minds — sewage.

Twelve of 15 speakers from the floor opposed the plan to fill a small cove and erect a large concrete pump-house to take sewage from parts of Victoria and Saanich and all of Oak Bay and send it over Gonzalez Hill past Ross Bay to Clover Point outfall.

Aldermen learned:

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — A coroner's jury Tuesday night exonerated a six-man tactical squad in the shooting death of prison worker Mary Steinhauser, saying the squad acted in the belief her life was threatened by three prisoners holding her hostage.

The jury deliberated eight hours before ruling that Miss Steinhauser's death June 11, 1975, was unnatural and accidental. It decided that the tactical squad was justified in rushing the area where she and 14 other hostages were being held by convicts Andrew Bruce, Dwight Lucas, and Claire Wilson.

The seven-member jury recommended that future incidents at the British Columbia Penitentiary be handled by an outside body which should have training in negotiations, communications and tactical operations.

The group should be large enough so that rest periods and changes of shift can be accommodated, the jury said.

During the 41-hour June siege, members of the six-man tactical squad said they had no opportunity to sleep and some had gone without sleep for 50 hours.

They also testified during the inquest that they had little communication with prison officials and negotiators.

The jury recommended that an interim tactical squad be formed at the prison to act during the time that would pass from the beginning of any future incident until the outside squad could arrive. It said the penitentiary squad should be composed of non-custodial staff.

Coroner Doug Jack earlier drew attention to insufficient investigation following the incident by New Westminster City Police and the jury recommended that local police send qualified investigators into the penitentiary at the start of any incident.

The jury said "the frustration and tension of inmates as

Heavy Noose Pressure

OTTAWA (CP) — Many of the 133 members of Parliament who voted on second reading for abolition of hanging have been under heavy pressure to change their minds.

It has come as strongly from the 125 who voted to retain hanging as from their constituents.

The retentionists feel they can defeat the bill and restore hanging by changing a few minds before the vote on third and final reading is held.

The tactic appears to be working.

Bruce Halliday (PC—Oxford) visited his riding within a week of voting for abolition and returned to Ottawa saying he was still an abolitionist but might not be able to support the bill on third reading unless changes were made.

George Hees (PC—Prince Edward-Hastings) indicated Tuesday he also had changed his mind. He said he would vote for an amendment that would retain the death penalty for those who kill police or prison guards.

Flora MacDonald (PC—Kingston-and-The-Islands), an abolitionist, has found herself under heavy pressure from prison employees in her Ontario riding. Some of it is being generated by retentionists, Parliament Hill sources say.

Lincoln Alexander (PC—Hamilton West) says his resolve has only been strengthened by the retentionist blitz aimed at his constituents.

Mr. Alexander, in hospital with a back ailment, says he will do his best to get back to the House to support the abolition bill.

Like Mr. Alexander, Gus MacFarlane (L—Hamilton Mountain) has faced heavy pressure by critics who say he is two-faced.

The charge is based on his

SCHOOL SQUEEZE IF STRIKE LASTS

If the construction lockout lasts beyond the end of July, contingency plans will be needed to look after 750 students in the Gordon Head area, assistant school superintendent Dr. John Wiens said Tuesday.

"If the lockout ends this month, we will be all right," he said.

The schools affected are Lambriek Junior secondary and Torquay elementary. About 500 students are scheduled to attend Lambriek in September and slightly more than 250 are expected at Torquay.

Both schools were within two weeks of being completed when the lockout took effect July 2.

It would only take a short time to complete the buildings and move furniture, which could be completed by September if work could resume by Aug. 1, he said.

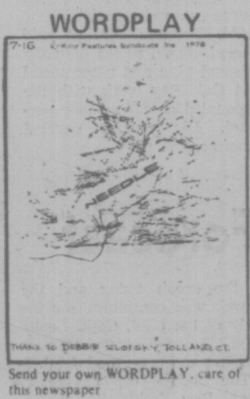

School board officials plan meetings this week to prepare contingency plans for the 750 students in the event the lockout continues through July and into August.

Meanwhile, negotiations to end the strike-lockout have been slowed down by separate talks over trade issues of the various unions.

Jack Whittaker, spokesman for the operating engineers, said talks which opened Monday still had not reached the question of wages and other monetary matters Tuesday.

"It looks like we'll try to get the trade issues out of the way first," said Whittaker. He said he had no idea when they might reach the major question of the settle-

MONTREAL — Telegrams from international sports officials to the International Olympic Committee and Montreal Games organizers condemned the Canadian government Tuesday and praised the IOC for opposing Canada's threat not to allow Taiwanese athletes to compete under the name Republic of China.

"The Games must remain free from international politics," said a telegram from the United States Olympic committee to Roger Rouseau, president of the Olympic organizing committee here.

The U.S. committee also repeated an earlier announcement that it would "seriously question the United States participation" in the Games should the IOC remove its sanction from the event.

Canada has said the Taiwanese may not compete under the name Republic of China nor use the name the Republic of China at the Games.

Meanwhile, External Affairs Minister Allan Rock said Tuesday Taiwanese athletes will likely be turned back at Montreal airport unless Canada receives prior assurances that they will not claim to represent the Republic.

$100,000 Damage

MONTREAL (CP) — An official of Alcan Aluminum Ltd. said Tuesday that strikers who invaded the company's June 30, may have caused more than $100,000 in damage.

The strikers invaded the plant and ordered workers out, and then set up picket lines to keep them out, a company spokesman said.

He said the damage, an official estimate of which is still being made, is believed to have been caused soon after the strikers entered the plant. The smelter has since resumed normal production.

The Shawinigan facility is the only one of four Alcan smelters in Quebec currently not strikebound.

No Rollback Says Davis

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

Transport Minister Jack Davis said today he is standing firm on B.C. Ferries rate increases and if the province just hangs on for a few months, all will be well.

Davis said he has no plans to take a second look at the fares, most of which doubled June 1 and which have led to charges by Island business men that the rates are responsible for a substantial drop in ferry traffic.

Davis was replying to a claim by NDP finance critic Dave Stupich that B.C. Ferries would have been financially better off if the rates had been increased only 20 per cent instead of 100 per cent.

Stupich, the member for Nanaimo, said ferry users would have accepted a 20 per cent increase, preventing a one-third drop in ferry traffic.

Davis said he does not think the level of ferry fares has much to do with the amount of travel.

"The biggest single factor is the competitive situation with the U.S." He said last year the Canadian dollar was at a four or five-cent discount compared to the U.S. dollar, but this year there is a four or five-cent premium.

"I've seen pictures of cars queuing up at the border going south to get a little sun and take advantage of the situation," he said.

B.C. residents are fed up with the weather and convinced there are bargains for the asking on the U.S. side of the border, Davis said.

"Given a few months, things will settle down, we'll get away from these exceptional circumstances and see a 50-70 per cent increase in revenue from last year."

The minister said that under Stupich's suggestion of a 20 per cent ferry rate increase, the system "wouldn't have gained a nickel."

He said costs for the system are rising faster than 20 per cent and even if the traffic volume had remained the same net revenue would not have increased.

Stupich also charged earlier this week that fare increases had resulted in food price increases on Vancouver Island.

But Davis said the impact of ferry fares on food prices is "purely nominal."

$107,008 JACKPOT

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — A Chicago man got a special bang out of the Fourth of July in this gambling resort when he heard bells on the one-dollar progressive jackpot machine at the MGM Grand Hotel.

The customer hit a $107,008 jackpot at 3 a.m. on the day the nation celebrated its 200th birthday, a hotel spokesman disclosed Tuesday.

A spokesman for the hotel said the payoff came on the same machine which set off the all-time jackpot record payoff of $152,638 a year ago. The hotel spokesman said the winner asked that his name not be released.

'Lion' Dogs Police

TACOMA (AP) — The "lion" which led police officers on a long, bullet-punctuated chase here during the weekend is a dog.

Or so humane society officials believe after they captured a dog, part collie and part shepherd, with fur cut to make it look like the fearsome African creature.

The dog has a shaggy black mane, a closely-trimmed light brown body and a black tuft at the end of its long tail.

It was captured Sunday evening, about a day after the lion chase began.

Two police patrol officers saw the animal Saturday night. They fired at it with a shotgun and revolver, but believe they missed.

The creature was spotted again Sunday afternoon near the city dump, but eluded officers in an hour-long search.

A humane society officer found the dog Sunday evening. He said it was cut on its paw, but not otherwise wounded.

Oak Bay Vetoes Pumping Station Plan

By AB KENT
Times Staff

A crowd of more than 400 articulate citizens persuaded Oak Bay council Tuesday to kill both the design and location of a proposed $1.4 million sewage pumping station at Shoal Bay.

Packing the Senior Citizens' Centre to overflowing, residents delivered an unmistakable message to a special two-hour meeting of council, which finally decided to tell the Capital Regional District to seek an alternative to the station.

The crowd about 300 were seated with the rest standing in the aisle and in every open doorway, represented a cross section of Oak Bay society.

There were professional men who left work early; retired gentry; a shapely lady in shorts fresh off her sun-deck; others dressed to the nines; couples with noisy

—Trial Island is the most-favored alternative site if any pumping station is necessary.

—Extension of McMicking Point outfall could eliminate the need of a pumping station at much less cost.

—There is less opposition to a previous suggestion that the station be placed away from housing at the edge of Oak Bay golf course.

bird sanctuary and poses potential health and traffic hazards.

All is not sweetness and light at similar pumping stations in Seattle.

After the hearing Mayor Brian Smith urged council to reject the capital region's plan.

"This should be a lesson that in Oak Bay we take our politics very seriously and matters involving the waterfront very seriously, and we don't appreciate being informed at the last minute," Smith said.

He said council was in the front line of controversy over the question while the regional board remained "in the misty distance."

He said the "most impressive meeting" showed Oak Bay citizens are vigilant of their waterfront and hold a "healthy distrust of any form of change."

Job Scene Improves

There are still 2,500 to 3,000 students listed as looking for work but with summer well under way the job picture is looking a little brighter, Student Manpower director Anne Walker said Tuesday.

Her office has filled 1,016 jobs to date this season, she said.

Just how many young people still want work remains somewhat of a question because when some of them are phoned with a job opportunity, it turns out, they are already working or have gone to summer school. They don't always remember to advise her office.

At present, jobs to be filled are being phoned in by employers at an average of about 30 a day and that's a distinct improvement over the 15 or so a day of a couple of weeks ago.

Some of the work is short-term, provided by householders who want someone to paint the house or mow the lawn.

About half the calls are for jobs which will take the balance of the summer, she said.

Pay varies from a minimum of $2.60 an hour ("Not many of them") to close to $7 an hour for some of the municipal laboring positions. Anne estimates the average would be about $3.50 an hour.

The situation looked much grimmer a month or more ago, with an estimated 4,500 students from high school and university looking for work.

At the moment, the job picture for students looks about as it did a year ago, she said, perhaps even a little better.

The office produces all kinds of jobs, from special constable to cow milker to municipal archivist. The depressed tourist industry hasn't been producing as many jobs and this has had an indirect effect as well, with small businesses which cater to tourists not hiring as much help either.

A provincial labor department grant of $433,000 helped some small businesses and farmers hire students as well as municipalities. Saanich has 82 students on its payroll. Victoria 53, Oak Bay about 50 and Esquimalt 31. Many are operating playgrounds and others working for parks or public works departments.

One of the fears expressed earlier was that university students unable to find work this summer could not afford to return to their studies.

Walker said she believes that it is the younger high school student with little experience to offer, and probably a few more girls than boys, having the most trouble getting summer jobs.

But she said if they are really keen they won't give up. They should check the job bulletin board at the Student Manpower office at least daily. That's on the second floor at 545 Yates St.

Employers with jobs to be filled can call 382-4332.

ESCAPING GAS PEEVES PEOPLE

City council's public works department will monitor the noise level at a gas-passing plant that's peeving Dallas Road area residents.

Harold Sawyer, spokesman for Canadian Liquid Air Ltd., 90 Dallas Road, said the noise, which he described as "like a loud wind caused by gas escaping" is caused by oxygen and nitrogen being forced from lines during the plant's start-up.

Engineers, he told Tuesday's weekly council caucus meeting, are trying to find ways of muffling the noise, which residents claim sometimes occurs at 4 a.m. and lasts for up to 30 minutes.

Sawyer agreed to a request that the company not start up in future before 8 a.m.

Region Board Will Battle Developers

By DON VIFOND
Times Staff

Chairman Jim Campbell said Tuesday the Capital Region Board will try for the third time to find some way of stopping major developers from riding roughshod over community plans for Colwood and Langford.

The board's second effort failed with word from Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis last week that he would not support a regional bylaw introducing a temporary land freeze over about 1,500 acres in the so-called "western community."

Campbell said that decision appears to leave half a dozen major developers owning land in the area to "go their own way," just as everyone else have been doing out there for so long — screwing it about.

The chairman said he is seeking an immediate meeting with Curtis in hopes the minister can be persuaded to change his mind.

What the regional board wants to do is impose a temporary development freeze until a community plan and zoning bylaw are enacted, likely late this year.

It failed to persuade the provincial government to take such a step through its environment and land use committee earlier this year. Now it has been unable to persuade Curtis to support a regional bylaw doing the same thing. Such bylaws must have provincial approval before they can be finally enacted.

In a letter to Campbell the municipal affairs minister said he is not prepared to be a party to halting development proposals already under way because the regional board neglected to take adequate steps earlier to control growth.

Campbell said today that explanation doesn't stand up because the courts have made it clear developers whose plans are in fact under way can't be halted by such bylaws.

What seems to have happened, he said, is some developers have drawn some plans, indicating some intentions without actually making any substantial investment, and they are upset at the thought of being restricted by a community plan and zoning which would insist on green space and proper sewerage.

Campbell said one effect of development going ahead outside proper area planning is that subdivisions would go in with septic tanks and homeowners would be most reluctant to later pay their share of a proper sewage collection system.

The chairman said the regional board has not asked the province to halt any development that was literally under way.

"We're interested in making sure the best possible development takes place in that area."

SCANP FOLK THINK SO

Is Atomic Plant B.C.'s Concern?

Finally, we have an ear if not a voice.

And that's a measure of success, at least. For what is being debated and what is being decided could greatly affect the future of us all — in Victoria, in British Columbia and, in fact, in all of Canada.

You may not have heard much about it, but today over in Seattle the first of two final hearings, which will determine whether the Skagit Nuclear Power Project will go ahead or will be scrapped, are being held.

But that's in Washington, you say. That's not in B.C. And you're right, geographically. But you're wrong, morally. For that's what too many people up here have been saying for too long.

For three years now, the people of SCANP (Skagitians Concerned About Nuclear Plants) have fought through every level of hearings to stop the project (represented by Puget Power, Bechtel Corporation, the oil companies which have invested in uranium, and the General Electric-Westinghouse electrical consortium).

But they have fought alone. In the three years of hearings, B.C. has never had a representative attend nor has even been consulted. SCANP has been doing its best to make people here aware of the nearness of the proposed plant and, at last, we are starting to realize we are involved whether we like it or not.

A few days ago, I met Ann McMillan who lives a mere 10 miles from the planned site in the Skagit Valley and who describes herself as a sort of ambassador for SCANP.

She spent the day hanging around the Legislative Buildings trying to meet as many MLAs as possible and generally putting pressure on the government to get B.C. involved in the final hearings.

She explained that Puget Power proposes to build at least two huge nuclear power reactors near Sedro-Woolley in Washington and that SCANP has considerable evidence showing the site is totally unsuitable for such a risky endeavor.

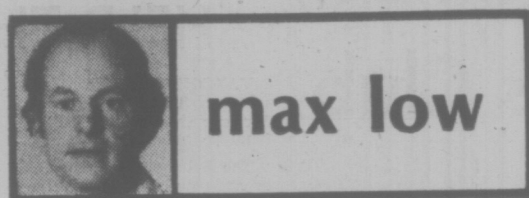

The entire Pacific Northwest area is a major earthquake zone and SCANP's consultant ecologist Dr. Eric Cheney of the University of Washington has found a major earthquake fault line within nine miles of the plant site," Ann said.

Also, she pointed out, the site is 15 miles from Mt. Rainier "and the volcanic activity there has been greatly increased lately."

We in B.C. may not realize it but the site chosen is a mere 32 air miles from the Canadian border and the prevailing wind conditions are to the north 70 to 80 per cent of the time. According to SCANP, the size of the plant indicates that the radioactive inventory at full production will be equivalent to that from several thousand Hiroshima-size bombs. An earthquake, a volcanic eruption or a nuclear accident could result in vast amounts of radioactivity being spewed into the atmosphere, resulting in the contamination of the environment and endangering life in a large area of the northwest.

While the hearings went on today in the Federal Building in Seattle, SCANP protesters were outside.

And inside, Samuel Jensen, chairman of the Atomic Safety and Licensing Board on the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) received a telegram from CASE (Citizens Association to Save the Environment) in Victoria. It read:

"Sir, this association, one of the largest environmental groups in B.C., is deeply concerned about the proposed development of two atomic reactors in Washington State close to the Canadian border. We sincerely urge you and members of your commission to exhibit environmental integrity and, with a humanism that will be applauded by millions, to oppose and prohibit these reactor developments that will pose a threat to present and future lives in both Washington State and B.C."

"Sir, if your terms of reference enable you to strongly advocate overt energy conservation that will eliminate the need for these diabolical reactors, we will strongly support you and we will similarly support any level of government exhibiting the same attitudes."

So far, our government isn't exhibiting any attitudes. But it is paying attention, thanks to SCANP and the people of B.C. And that's encouraging.

During a three-week vigil at the recent Habitat Forum in Vancouver, SCANP gathered the signatures of more than 1,200 British Columbians who paid 50 cents each toward telegrams sent to Premier Bennett demanding B.C. participation in the NRC hearings in Seattle.

Of course, politicians can't resist a bit of buck-passing. But, as I said before, a measure of success was achieved.

Bennett referred the matter to Environment Minister Jim Nielsen who in turn informed SCANP president Ron Carstens that "it's not our policy to make presentations to hearings held by foreign governments on matters coming within their jurisdiction."

"Any representations," Nielsen's letter to Carstens continued, "should more properly be made at the national level where Canadian interests could be involved."

"This does not mean that we have no concern over such developments and the possible effect on B.C., and to keep ourselves informed on this matter we will be sending an expert on air pollution, W. T. Morecraft from the department of environment, as an observer."

So there you have it — an ear at last.

And that was the result of public pressure.

It will be that same kind of pressure, Ann McMillan believes, that will cause the NRC to decide in the people's favor and scrap the proposed project. But, she said, the fight has been a long one.

SCANP survives on donations and anyone wishing to help should write to Carstens at P.O. Box 331 Anacortes.

The last hearing will be in Seattle on Aug. 17. After that, the NRC will make its decision: Puget Power and Bechtel will begin building; or they will go home and leave the Valley alone.

Ann hopes and believes it will be the latter. But she says SCANP needs more support and more help to make sure.

"This is a situation where it's possible for the people to win," she says.

"Usually, in such a situation, the odds are so big that people feel lost and are defeated."

"But this time we have a strong, a very strong, case ... and we can win!"

Ann McMillan ... a strong case

Halibut Vies With Caviar

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Halibut, once a humble fish adored by those with a penchant for fish and chips, is getting as costly as caviar.

It could also become as scarce.

Fish processing plants are caught in the squeeze of rising costs and are reluctant to buy more than they need.

Oakland Industries on Montreal, as an example, stopped buying halibut two weeks ago.

General manager Peter Wilson reports the company has sufficient to supply its customers but high prices being paid fishermen this year make it unprofitable for the processing plants.

"We're paying them twice what we did last year," Wilson reported.

Fishermen receive $1.38 per pound, Wilson explained that Oaklands sells fresh halibut to its customers at $1.75 a pound and frozen, $1.85 per pound.

The difference is less than half the markup in retail outlets.

At Woodwards, as an example, halibut steaks were selling at $2.99 a pound while halibut pieces were priced at $2.89 a pound.

Operators of local fish and chipperies are also being hard pushed by the spiralling costs of fish.

Charles LaVertu uses nothing but halibut in his London Fish and Chip Cafe on Pandora.

The price of fish went up again last week but Vertu says, "We will try to absorb the increase for the time being ... I try to keep my head above water."

When LaVertu started in 1970 a single serving of fish and chips cost 80 cents and take-out orders were priced at 35 cents. Now one serving costs $2.25 and affords a minimal profit.

The International Pacific Halibut Commission in Seattle has set a catch limit of 25 million pounds this year. About 12 million pounds had been landed by June 30.

Victoria Construction Slumps 16% This Year RENTS CAUSE CONCERN

Victoria building permits during the first half of this year totalled only $20.8 million, down 16 per cent from the same period last year, the city engineering department said today.

And last year's total was unusually low because of a lockout of municipal workers at the beginning of the year.

The 1976 half-yearly total is down 20 per cent from $26.1 million in the first half of 1974.

The city issued 2,370 permits during the six months, down from 2,640 in 1974 but higher than the 1,543 issued in 1975 when the time period was shortened by the lockout.

In the six months this year, apartments, condominiums and commercial buildings accounted for most of the value of the permits. There were only 20 single family dwelling permits issued in the six months for a total value of $804,800.

There were only two industrial building permits issued for a total value of $147,440.

There were 25 apartment and condominium permits issued for a total value of $9.1 million, while 13 permits were for commercial buildings worth $1.1 million.

Electrical installation permits totalled $3.4 million and 337 permits worth $4.1 million were for repairs and alterations.

While the six-month totals were down, the June activity was fairly brisk. There were 438 permits issued during the month worth $3.8 million, well above $2.2 million last June and up slightly from $3.6 million in June, 1974.

The June permits included a total of 73 condominium units in five separate projects. In addition, a $98,000 permit for the construction of four townhouses was issued.

RENTS CAUSE CONCERN

A total of 212 persons received assistance during the month of June at Charles Barber's community office at 1025 Blanshard.

Although the figure represents a slight decrease, office personnel said it was expected to drop with the arrival of summer.

Housing was the main area of concern — there were numerous requests for information about low-rental housing and housing co-ops and a number of complaints about rent increases.

Another area of concern was expressed by a number of people who received requests by the human resources department that persons under 65 on Mincome report to human resources offices for their annual review and reapplication.

Community office volunteers said they reassured these people that the action is normal government policy and represents no threat to continued monthly cheques.

Barber said he will be spending more time at the offices now that the legislature is no longer in session.

Council Asks Airline To Pay Up Back Rent

Victoria Flying Services Ltd. have two weeks to pay up arrears on rent they owe for using a float plane wharf in the Inner Harbor or they could find themselves leaseless ... and wharf-less.

Victoria city council's central area development committee issued that ultimatum after learning the charter airline company was $247.50 behind in its payments to the city on a sublease of the wharf.

The company has held tenacity on the wharf on a month-to-month basis at $82.50 a month since February, 1975, when their lease expired and was taken over by the city.

In a letter to city clerk Morrin Waller the company asked that the lease be renewed this month.

That raised the ire of committee members, who felt the company should either pay up or get out.

"There's no point in carrying on in any basis until they pay," Mayor Mike Young declared.

HE BEAT THE SEA

Longevity comes to a hunter naturally if he can survive the wrath of the sea, according to Chief Charlie Jones of Port Renfrew, who celebrated his 100th birthday today.

The chief, believed to be the last of the pelagic seal hunters, was trained as a boy to harpoon seals from the bow of a canoe and took part in seal hunting expeditions in the Bering seas.

"A hunter develops strong chest, arm and leg muscles," he explained. "He lives long if the sea doesn't claim him — if he remains true to his guardian spirit."

When logging was introduced in the Port Renfrew area, the logging camp at Bear Cree, about 15 miles up the San Juan River, depended on the chief for its provisions. He used to pole a canoe laden with supplies up the river.
